PROFESSOR THULINIUS.

MY DEAR SIR,—I feel I should be wanting in duty did I neglect the opportunity of sending you my testimony as to the wondrous efficacy of your rheumatic specific.

For the past ten years I have been a complete martyr to rheumatism in all its forms. I have tried doctors and hospitals at various times of suffering, and also, I think, every form of advertised remedies, and also followed the advice of well-meaning friends, with a view of effecting a cure for this most trying disease. All that I have been able to accomplish hitherto has been, at best, temporary relief from pain. I am well known, and scores can testify that at best I could only crawl about with difficulty, and are surprised at my present agility in getting about from place to place. After leaving Little Bay Hospital at the close of last year, I was persuaded to try a bottle of your "Thulinius," and in a week or so afterwards I could get about fairly well. Upon again suffering a relapse last February, I took another bottle, with an equally successful result; but at last I determined to go through a course of treatment, and have just completed my fourth bottle, with the gratifying knowledge that I am now free from pain, can walk any reasonable distance without fatigue, have an excellent appetite, and feel myself again competent to re-enter my profession, added to which my oft-repeated attacks of pleurisy have become things of the past. I have not dieted myself in any way, so all the credit is due to your wonderful remedy, under Providence, that my blood is becoming purer daily, and its effects upon my liver and kidneys most pronounced. I send you with this the date of my previous attacks and sufferings should you wish to show them. I shall only be too glad personally to convince fellow sufferers of the benefits to be derived from a course of your treatment, as exemplified in my own case after ten years' martyrdom.—I remain yours faithfully

W. H. NEWTON NEWMAN,
Teacher of Elocution, and twenty-five years Actor and Manager.

The Rev. J. D. LANGLEY, St. Phillip's parsonage, can testify as to the crippled state of MR. NEWMAN prior to his taking "Thulinius."

The Leader.
AUTHORITY TO ALL.
Published every Saturday Morning.
SATURDAY, 2nd FEBRUARY.

The president of Prestonshire (Cr. Bayliss) called attention on Monday evening to a recent paragraph in the Age, in which Cr. Talbot, of Brunswick, was reported to have complained about the pollution of the Merri Creek, near Victoria Street, by the drainage from one of the factories situated on the flats, which lived on the Preston side of the creek, ostensibly as vegetable gardeners, but who in reality kept and slaughtered pigs without taking any sanitary precautions or being under any supervision. This, said Cr. Bayliss, was a gross reflection on their officers, and it was very unfair and unneighborly for a Brunswick councillor to make such a groundless report without making due enquiry as to the facts. He gave the rashly-made statement an unqualified denial, as if it were based on a undisclosed fact, and if a report was calculated to have a most prejudicial effect on the shire. Cr. Paterson also expressed his indignation at the report, and regretted that Cr. Talbot did not enquire before he condemned. Cr. White said he had taken the trouble to visit the spot indicated by Cr. Talbot, and found it to be in Northcote territory. Cr. Crawley moved that a letter be written to the Brunswick council, reprimanding them for their false report. Seconded by Cr. Barrow and carried.

The heartiness with which the residents of Preston have entered into the work of arranging a moonlight fête in aid of the Preston Cricket Club, which is to commence on Thursday evening, when ladies and gentlemen, about sixty in number, responded to the invitation given in last week's Leader. Through an oversight the authorities of the shire-hall had not been advised of the meeting, and as a consequence locked doors and aulit halls prevented ingress. After some unavailing efforts had been made to lay hold of the keys, the company, at half-past eight, adjourned to the Church of England. In the absence of the president of the fête committee (Cr. Bayliss) the Rev. S. Adamson was voted to the chair, after which the hon. secretary (Rev. Harriott Watson) briefly sketched the business transacted at the previous meeting, and reported that the council had wholly granted its purchase and also the use of the chamber for holding meetings in. Mr. C. Crispe generously offered to supply the necessary timber for staging purposes, as well as the use of his horses & carts, which the committee readily accepted. Owing to a slight accident Mr. E. A. Walker was unable to be present, but wrote informing the committee that his services were at their disposal. This offer was accepted with thanks. The secretary also intimated that Mr. T. Lightfoot had volunteered to lend any assistance he could. Letters were read from most of the friendly societies, and Mr. Williams, who acted as spokesman, informed the meeting that they had abandoned the idea of a procession as the time was too limited to make the necessary arrangements. The delegates, however, had decided upon holding a series of tug-of-war contests between the different societies, the members of whom were anxious to do all in their power to assist the committee. (Applause). There will also be a tent tug-of-war match between teams representing the Preston A.N.A. and Northcote. The programme which will be supplied by the Police Band, who have also kindly consented to play through Northcote and Preston on the park. The grounds are to be brilliantly illuminated, and the taster of visitors will find abundant satisfaction in patronizing the refreshment stalls, which are to be laden with seasonable delicacies. Several other attractions are also being arranged, and judging from present indications the committees' exertions are likely to meet with the reward they merit. Favored with fine weather a most enjoyable entertainment will ensue. The tickets are only 6d. each, and visitors from Northcote may procure same at the Leader office.

At the Preston public hall on Thursday evening next a grand concert and social will be given in aid of the organ fund of the Rev. R.C. church. For the former a first-class programme has been arranged, the artists including the well-known and popular soprano, Miss Josephine O'Brien, the well-known tenor, Mr. D. T. Player, and the clever young ventriloquial entertainer, Mr. Will Stewart, all whom are a special laugh or love "a good song" are enjoined "not to miss this concert." The social follows at 10.30. Particulars, as to prices, etc., are advertised elsewhere.

A concert and coffee supper was given in celebration of the anniversary of the Northcote Primitive Methodist Church on Monday evening last. There was a fair attendance, and Mr. T. Agar presided. The performers in the main were new to Northcote, and the programme provided gave complete satisfaction. Mr. Bill was happy in his selections, and, with pleasing effect, such favorites as "The holy city," "By the fountain," and "The Lighthouse" were rendered in acceptable rendering of "Sing sweet bird," while "The old countree" and "Never more" were tunefully sung by Mrs Campbell. Other enjoyable numbers were "Never again" and "The children's home," by Miss Biddle, and Mr. Campbell contributed two well-executed piano solos, and also performed the duties of accompanist. "Anchored" was pathetically given by Mr. Brooks, whilst Miss Bowen (who took Mr Collense's place in the programme) enlisted the attention and sympathy of her hearers in a touching and enchanting delivery of Sims' beautifully pathetic poem, "Ostler Joe," and in response to an emphatic encore, rolled "The traveler's wife" with much success. With her almost faultless elocution and graceful action Miss Bowen will always meet with a hearty welcome in Northcote. After a special vote of thanks to the performers and preachers of Sunday the company adjourned to the schoolroom, where the ladies had provided refreshments, which were freely partaken of. A word of praise is due to Mr. Membrey for arranging the concert.

The Working Men's College, the chief economic and social science, reopens its classes for the current year on Monday next. All classes of the community are considered in the curriculum of the college. Free use is made under for the etriasns, such as carpentry, plumbing, coach-building, sign-writing, decorating, and bootmaking; there are science classes (including all the sciences bearing upon the industries of modern times), and art classes in which drawing and painting in all branches are taught, including modelling in clay, one of the most beautiful and instructive arts in connection with these are also such classes as cookery and dressmaking, which have been largely attended in the past and should be now in a position to attract much useful knowledge. The manual training classes (wood-working) for boys having proved very successful, it has been arranged to hold classes every afternoon and on Saturday mornings. In farming subjects there are horticulture, wool-sorting, and veterinary science, and it is also intended to add this year agriculture, bee-keeping, poultry-farming, and stock-breeding. Intending students can obtain all information by sending to the college, enclosing a prepaid-envelope, stamp.

All Saints' Church held their annual meeting in the schoolroom on Wednesday night, the incumbent, Rev. C. P. Thomas in the chair. The guardians' report showed receipts for the year amounting to £389 2s 10d, being an increase of £39 12s 7d over preceding year. A proposal was made to erect a new schoolroom, the scheme being to raise the necessary funds by the issue of debentures at a fixed rate of interest, and to be repaid as funds permit by ballot. The Rev. Symonds, of St. Philip's, Collingwood, was present, and delivered the bona officia and effect of the Society of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, a branch of which it is proposed to establish in connection with All Saints' Northcote. An enjoyable musical programme was rendered by members of the choir, the following numbers being given:—"Ora pro nobis," Miss Lewis; "Oh that we two were maying," Miss Trinnear and Mr. Bailey; "Queen of the earth," Mr. Wood; "When the swallows homeward fly," Miss Laibmond; "The Garoune," Mr Law; "Hear me, Norma," Miss Angell; glee, "Beam of light." The following gentlemen were elected guardians for ensuing year:—Messrs J. F. C. Anderson, F. T. Beaumont, P. E. Brown, A. B. Ingram, A. Seidel, Coulson, S. Lazarus, J. F. C. Richardson, J. Richardson, Jun., G. R. B. Steane, W. G. Swift. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the retiring guardians, who have served on the church for their assistance during the past year, and also to the members of the choir for their kindly help. It is gratifying to note that all the funds have credit balances, viz., General £1 11s 7d; Building, £1 11s 4d; Sunday school, £10 18s 6d; Band of Hope, £1 18s 6d.

EPPING SHIRE NEWS.

A notification of importance to dairy-keepers within the shire appears in our advertising columns. The regulation of the Central Board of Health demands that all dairies shall be registered in January of each year. The fee is 5s, and certificates of registration may be obtained at the shire office on Thursdays between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. All who dispose of dairy produce, irrespective of quantity, are liable for registration, and the penalties for non-obedience to the regulation are very heavy.

At the recent conference of municipalities to consider the best means of dealing with the rabbit pest it was unanimously decided, in view of the increase of rabbits during the past season, to urge upon the Government the necessity of re-appointing the inspectors formerly in the employ of the department, as, inspection by the police has not proved satisfactory. Cr. Dunn (Yea) also moved, and Cr. Barry (Epping) seconded, and it was carried—"That as the Rabbit Destruction Act, as at present being administered, is not giving satisfaction, the Government be requested to take immediate and more stringent action towards suppressing the rabbit pest." It was further decided, on the motion of Crs Dunn and Barry to make an urgent appeal to the Government that mortgagees and advances shall be included in the operation of the Act, and that resolutions to this effect be been carried, a deputation, including Cr. Barry, was formed to wait on the Minister of Lands.

Noticing in the Leader that "rabbits were a nuisance" in the northern part of Epping, a couple of Northcote and Preston councillors who have a partiality for sport took a drive in that direction in the hope of obtaining better reward as a great deal of walking resulted in a very small bag. They had better apply to Cr. Barry when they want a more profitable day's sport.

MOONLIGHT FETE REMINDERS.

The proceeds are in aid of the Preston Ladies' Benevolent Society.

The small sum of sixpence will enable you to join the army of supporters and participate in the festivities.

Tickets, 6d each, may be had from any member of the committee, and also at this office.

The attractions are numerous, including exciting tug-of-war competitions, choice musical selections, fireworks, and probably a balloon ascent.

All persons who have promised fruit, drinks, provisions, etc., are particularly requested to send same to the Presbyterian Church on Tuesday next.

The final general committee meeting will take place on Tuesday evening at the shire-hall, at 8 o'clock, when reports from sub-committees will be received and arrangements completed.

Members of the various committees must respond to duty's call, and thus provide for the success of the fête.

Lighting Committee.—Messrs. E. A. Walker, Backhouse, Slade, Cripps, Cannon, Whalley, and Coulson, convener.

Staging Committee.—Messrs Smart, Stanlake, Pike, Hurlstone, Pittard, and Williams, convener.

Ground Committee.—Messrs J. W. Robinson, Mutimer, Fyfe, convener, Rev S. Adamson, and several members from the Preston Branch A.N.A.

The ladies, of course, have charge of the refreshments.

Mr E. A. Walker will be responsible for the limelight display and views.

LOCALISMS.

Good headay is now being made with the Preston municipal buildings, and their completion will be announced before long.

Cr. Howse on Monday evening elicited the fact that there was a bye-law in force in the shire-clerk's office with master of driving without lights. All had forgotten its existence save Cr. Paterson.

"There's nothing from the Dr. to-night; therefore the health of the shire must be good," remarked President Bayliss with satisfaction, when the absence of a report was intimated on Monday evening.

Mr. Robert Harper, M.L.A., has sent a donation of two guineas to the Preston Reading and Recreation Rooms; Mr. Drelge has presented a photo and the Rev. Marriott Watson half a guinea.

Last week a woman, who refused to reveal her name to the local magistrate, was sent to gaol for a month for walking off with a pair of shoes from Dunnick's boot shop.

Miss Josephine O'Brien, Mr. D. T. Player, and Mr. Will Stewart are all to appear at the Preston R.C. church organ fund concert at the public-hall on Thursday evening next, as well as a host of other agreeable performers.

To the Preston council's letter asking when the Government subsidy might be expected, the delightfully vague reply has come that "the whole matter is now under consideration."

Northcote Amateur Minstrels will shortly give a concert to provide funds for the purchase of a proscenium and curtain.

Not until they had compiled the treasurer's score of 676 runs did the North-C.C.'s first innings against Malvern close. Fitzpatrick, Hamilton-smith and Coomber—added no less than 193 runs.

It has been decided to hold a grand bazaar in connection with the Preston Presbyterian Church during the first week in June. Already the spirit of enthusiasm is being thrown in the matter, and all previous records promise to be eclipsed.

Looked like a collapse yesterday when six of Australia's crack batsmen went down for 31. But Trumper, Iredale, and Trott, 34 (not out), however, came magnificently to the rescue, and when Trott wicket fell the total had reached a respectable 280 odd.

It is notified that if all few now overdue rates for the protection of dogs are not immediately paid, proceedings will be taken for their recovery.

The picnic in connection with the Northcote Presbyterian Church at Heidelberg on Saturday last passed off successfully. About 100 attended, and all appeared to thoroughly enjoy themselves.

Preston Free Library received 1201 visitors during last year, circulated 1290 books, and starts the new year with a credit balance of £1 7s. Well done, Mr secretary.

The Rev. G. M. Berry, of Essendon, and formerly of Northcote, has been promoted to the incumbency of Holy Trinity Church, Fitzroy. Mr. Berry, though the stipend at East Melbourne is greater than that at Essendon, Northcote, the Rev. Mr. Berry has declined to accept more than the sum which he received in the shire parish of Northcote.

Messrs W. Buckley and J. Jenkin, of the Northcote C.C., will on Tuesday night, therefore, be called on to bat, making a record score for the first wicket. The little ceremony will take place in the Preston Shire Hall, and members and supporters of the club are invited to attend.

A public meeting is announced to take place at the Northcote town-hall on Tuesday evening for the purpose of considering the propriety of presenting a petition to Parliament to abrogate the compulsory clause in the Land Act than have an extra rate; and if there were no working men in the world we could be very little for the engineer to do.

Cr. White thought the engineer should be able to do all the house at the disposal of the council during the coming year in the shire during the coming year in the shire during the coming year, however, dispense with his services altogether.

Cr. Nicholl complained that the movers in this matter had not brought before them a statement of the finances of the shire. Till then that he did not feel inclined to vote either way.

Cr. Howse replied that they would not need more than a quarter of the usual subsidy this year; they were £1000 overdrawn at the bank, and the revenue all round would be reduced.

Cr. Crawley—I ask your ruling, Mr. President, whether we are not in order in voting on the matter?

The president—Here are the adoptive clauses which provide for the payment of certain salaries.

The president said on the motion of this point, the president said he did not wish to rule in a strictly technical manner.

Cr. Barrow then rose to oppose the motion. Not two 12 months ago the salary of the secretary had been reduced by £57. Mr. Drodge was an officer who was worth every shilling of it. He was well up in the business of the shire, and he was a gentleman like that we must pay a fair wage, and he thought £200 a year or £4 a week little enough for the services of Mr. Drodge.

The motion was put and lost, only the mover and seconder voting for it.

The engineer's salary was then on a pinger be in future employed two days a week, at £1 a day. He thought this quite ample for the work he would have to do.

Cr. Nicholl seconder coming forward immediately.

Cr. Barrow said he would second it so that the might speak in opposition to it. The engineer had recently been receiving from £200 to £140, and he thought this was little enough to pay him. Though the ordinary work would be less, perhaps a good number of loan money would be expended during the year.

Cr. Howden supported the motion. Mr. Stewart was a good engineer, but he was too good for the shire, and perhaps he might take less now that the work of the shire was so much reduced.

The president said that the salaries of the officers of the shire were so hardly sufficient to encourage them to do their duty. If they were going to cut down the salary of the engineer he was dead against it. The present movement had emanated from the select efforts of councillors to bring about a minimum wage. When before the council felt the pinch of hard times and numbers and supporters of the club are invited to be present.

A public meeting is announced to take place at the Northcote town-hall on Tuesday evening for the purpose of considering the propriety of presenting a petition to Parliament to abrogate the compulsory clause in the Land Act than have an extra rate; and if there were no working men in the world we could be very little for the engineer to do.

Cr. White thought the engineer should be able to do all the house at the disposal of the council during the coming year in the shire during the coming year, however, dispense with his services altogether.

Cr. Nicholl complained that the movers in this matter had not brought before them a statement of the finances of the shire. Till then that he did not feel inclined to vote either way.

Cr. Howse replied that they would not need more than a quarter of the usual subsidy this year; they were £1000 overdrawn at the bank, and the revenue all round would be reduced.

Cr. Crawley—I ask your ruling, Mr. President, whether we are not in order in voting on the affairs of the shire without any special notice being given of the matter? All these statements are exaggerated. The shire is in a very good financial position, and there is no necessity to keep dragging this shire down. Let the shire go ahead. With proper supervision and due economy the day will be long distant when we shall be in a position to borrow.

Cr. Howden doubted whether they would be able to manage for very long on a 1s. rate.

The motion was then put.

Cr. Nicholl said he would not vote if he was not compelled to.

The president said he must vote.

Cr. Nicholl then voted for the motion, which was carried, the president and Cr. Howden voting against it.

Cr. Barrow then rose for the purpose of putting a few facts in regard to the finances of the shire before the council, but the president rule him out of order.

Cr. Howse then moved that the secretary be instructed to spend as little as possible during the coming year.

The president—That's a motion I can't accept, as it simply means that the secretary has been neglecting his duty, in the past. I must ask Cr. Howse to withdraw it.

Cr. Howse—Well there is too much spent in law. The secretary should not have such length of tether in this respect. He thought the council might look out for a cheaper firm of solicitors. The motion, however, could stand over for a week.

Cr. Barrow again rose for the purpose of a "clearing away this little bogey." but

The president again ruled that he had not leave to speak, as there was nothing before the chair." He would have an opportunity at next meeting.

The president—Have you any more motions, Cr. Howse?

Cr. Howse—Not to-night, Mr. President.

The president—Thank you. We will now adjourn.

NORTHCOTE POLICE COURT.

MONDAY, JANUARY 28TH.

[Before MESSRS KNOX and McINTOSH, J's.P.].

FIVE LARRIKINESES.

At a special sitting of the above court on Monday, the girls named Catherine and Maria Kelly, Jane and Kate O'Connor, and Ellen Davis, of Northcote, ranging from 14 to 17 years of age, were charged by the Northcote police with having in a lawless manner assaulted and robbed a Mrs. Ellen Bartlett, of Gordon-street, on Saturday morning last at 11 o'clock. Sergt. Constables Doyle and Warren at the house of a Mrs. Strathmore, in Harper street, off Westgarth street. Warrants had been issued by their parents against the O'Connor sisters, but the others had not been, the girl Davis simply because of finding her in such company.

Mr. Mitchell appeared for the O'Connor girls gave evidence to the effect that they had got entirely beyond their control and that their conduct had been very bad lately.

Mrs. Strathmore said Ellen Kelly stated that she resided in Carlton. Her mother's place was unknown and she did not know where they went, or what for, so a warrant for their arrest from Mr. Knox. The girls came to her house to game home on Friday and she had got a respectable situation for her. She thought the girls had left their homes because of their conduct.

Sergeant Mclaughlin said this stage the intention of the Bench to the unseemly levity of the said. Mrs. Strathmore said "Why, I'm sorry they were expelled from the court.

Constable Jones gave evidence as to the arrest, and said that "there was one the warrants at the house of Mrs Strathmore at Saturday morning last. He went to the front door and Constable Warren went to the back door to intercept any attempt to leave. He leaving in that direction. Mrs. Strathmore hesitated about opening the front door, and denied that there was any one on the premises. Witness, however, pushed the door open and forced his way in just in time to see the girls pulled up by Constable Warren. The girls had been playing cards. Besides the girls there were three Northcote boys who had escaped before the arrest. He had frequently seen the girl Davis loitering about the streets of Northcote during the past 14 months.

The Bench re-called O'Connor to ask him if he would like his youngest daughter, Jane, back, and give her another chance.

O'Connor replied that he was afraid it was too late.

The Bench—That's enough.

Catherine Kelly, Jane O'Connor, and Ellen Davis, were each sentenced to 3 months' imprisonment, Ellen Davis was committed to the Reformatory for 12 months, with the option of being sent to the Salvation Army Rescue Home. ["Captain" Houghton of the local corps of the Salvation Army was present in the court, ranged with bond quarters for the placing of the girl in the Rescue Home].

STATE OF THE TRAMWAY LINE.

[TO THE EDITOR].

SIR,—I desire to call attention to the Northcote tram management respecting the condition of the line coming from the top of Rucker's Hill to the terminus at Clifton Hill, the blocks at places being worn down so deep below the level of the rails, causing horses and vehicles to drive of railed to be wedging, but the ladies managed to get out safely. Fortunately, the ladies were dressed for the occasion, and had on their rubbers, or they would have had a wet time of it. Perhaps the Tramway Company would be good enough to have the line attended to, and save some of the fair sex from a ducking.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.—"EDIE."

The Dunwood band had marched and baulk-out from the Cape Town dockyard by moonlight. Yet, in the dawn an hour sun-wind-ease fence and start upon her voyage to Old Blighty.

The fanoul of the Siberian shone like a nasty-blackish, as did her glass piled, and glittering with a coating of fresh paint. After reading, like eyes, in the sun, and the gleam of her polished brasswork was such as to scare even mutiny. In five minutes after you looked at it. The white ensign of the Cross blessingly floating with its red St. Andrew's cross, floated at one tapering masthead, at the other the blue peter.

On board of her all was will confusion Her decks were crowded with passengers and their friends, and the clam-off, the latter continuing the forenoon six to one; with Bass-ice of cutter and hogsees; with with gay porters and stewards bringing on and removing Constables Doyle and Warren at the house of a Mrs. Strathmore, in Harper street, off Westgarth street. Warrants had been issued by their parents against the O'Connor sisters, but the others had not been, the girl Davis simply because of finding her in such company.

On his cement and white ship's quarter-deck, in the dawn, the Rev. Aldridge, I can see my normanness amount that hoop for the Bible. I feel as if I ought to be sent to be sure of it. Besides, there must be some of my tongue under that pile of bows. "What a fine ship that New Zealand boat is," said the old lady, as she and the clergyman sat in the cabin, at a table stewed to the seams of fruit, cruft, depicted and by the ship's officers, and the ladies Between 1 and the shore. She, too, was flying the blue peter.

"Isn't she?" acquiesced Violet. "She's the Rongatoa, and is usually a steamer of the Union line, I wonder if she's going to Sydney? I wonder if anyone I know is on board. Now I think we may go on deck."

The crowd in the saloon was not less dense than that on the deck, certainly not less noisy. Champagne corks were popping in the saloon, and the saloon was crowded. Stewards were skurrying hither and thither, with bottles and fine glasses, steering their way with marvellous dexterity among the crowd, laden with a chorus of orders, expostulations, objurations and imprecations. Mr. Renshaw's Group were making merry and pledging each other in the sparkling wine, and Renshaw continued to be a sparkling "gooseberry," all the while, and Renshaw, "Edie" was dancing, but the two ladies managed to get out safely. Fortunately, the ladies were dressed for the occasion, and had on their rubbers, or they would have had a wet time of it. Perhaps the Tramway Company would be good enough to have the line attended to, and save some of the fair sex from a ducking.

"Ah, Maurice, I have got you now—and you can't escape me!"

"It looks uncommonly like it."

"Edie, I love you."

"For that identical period. So now you know it. The world is a mere football at the feet of those who have the courage to take it by the horns."

"Edie, I love you."

"Edie foggy England don't the whole world."

"Edie, I want to tear her out of it, through the midnight sea, heaving to the Atlantic of Stars—to carry her from course. THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

A SOCIAL STORY

By H. E. Champion.

CHAPTER VIII.

"I really do hope," said Mortimer, who had been silently chafing during the last few minutes, "that you're going to take to us of the region of theorizing this evening. It all sounds so pretty up that way that I am quite longing to hear you down to practical difficulties."

"There is a little more ground to clear first," answered Blake, "but we are not far off the Promised Land. I am going now to try and solve your sympathies by showing how little the interests of capital and common sense need be opposed to each other."

"Well, I should be glad of that in a different way," [illegible] "for I've been more than once to see how anybody who called himself a reformer can help sneering at the Liberal party, in England, at any rate, is truly "the great engine of progress."

"That bonnet-on, too," said Dr Burton, "for I don't feel ashamed of calling myself a Liberal, and the way some of your Socialist friends denounce it it were not the instrument of every project for emancipating the oppressed is a perfect mystery to me."

"Oh, yes," said Mortimer with a laugh, "that extraordinary cant is a never failing source of amusement to us Tories. You dedicate that your motto is, 'Trust the people,' and you never can understand why the people don't return the compliment. You take it as a personal insult when you're reminded that in spite of your efforts at every kind of social bribe a great half of the working classes in England, at any rate, were not your Radicalism."

"Speaking for myself," retorted the doctor, "I can under-stand well enough that a half of the labor electorate are not Liberals. Their interest. But I assume Mr Blake will give us his view."

Thus called upon, Blake commenced:

"It is my present purpose to show what is the true drift and tendency of those very common-place, and, I fear, popular prejudices to which Mr Mortimer has just alluded. It is advanced as the marching wanted by the selling machine. Like the little boy in Tooley street, who are accused of having chosen up a malicious character, we, the people of England," one who had a fed up, exclaimed, "we hereby, in the name of labor to his mother. You may say that I am in the same case as Socialism has no inalienable right to speak on behalf of our interests, whatever may be the cause on the contrary. Let me assure thee, if we can find a minute in the interest of the laborer as a farmer.

There is no such antagonism, and only one which is disastrous, working a case which has arisen by reason of the wrong of the people from above or any workshop agitation from the needs and the necessities of the nation himself. This is the trade union movement. Workmen form these collisions, and, in any manner, occasionally exposed, though in the value of the social and social interest, their purposes are called in language to which are available well glad, and, which.

Let us consider the position of the work-ing. Manufacture, which, in the early days of the industrial revolution, primary property was established industry has been carried on for the object of making profit out of the wage system. It is man has no property to do but to sell his labor, and, in the sale of his labor, Socialism, he can compete but equally in the market, with the employer, who, in the case of the employer, is the owner of the labor, and the labor.

There is no such antagonism, and only one which is disastrous, working a case which has arisen by reason of the wrong of the people from above or any workshop agitation from the needs and the necessities of the nation himself. This is the trade union movement. Workmen form these collisions, and, in any manner

AGRICULTURAL.

Winter Food for Dairy Cows.

(Extracts from a Paper by J. L. Thompson, Director of Blackesley College, in the "Agricultural Gazette.")

The season of the past winter in many parts of the colony, the partial drought in the coastal districts, and the consequent scarcity of food for milch cows should be a warning to dairy farmers to make better provision for their stock in the future. I have travelled a good deal recently in the New England and other districts, and we amply established that little or no provision has been made for the winter weather in those and other parts of the colony.

There are many kinds of food which could be grown with advantage for winter feeding, but my object in penning the brief article is to again call attention to the claims of one, which is a most valuable and economical food, particularly in a dry season, and which, I fully believe, could be grown in most districts, with ploughs, rollers, harrows, etc., that is, if it can be made to pay as a crop for forage, but if it has never been grown for this purpose, tests should be made before any large acreage is put down. The crop is the milk, butter, and bacon factory, and the food making results has been obtained from the use of good sound silage. I may assert that in certain cases silage has been proved to be fattening, diuretic, laxative, and a tonic, and I may add that it is the best food we can give the dairy. In some cases the butter was improved by millers feeding the stock to them, and milking without washing their hands.

Although a silent fodder has been preserved in stacks, and also in holes simply dug in the ground, and lined with straw, the best method of storing stalk, is all round the side to be for the best and most economical, whether the fodder can be shelled, a really great advantage when stacking, engines or other strong fodder plants are dealt with.

The shape of silos in America and Great Britain has been somewhat modified during recent years, the round form being considered preferable to the square. There are over 50,000 silos in the United States (Ohio, Mich. and some 30th. deep. It has recently been found that silos in which the length and breadth are equal are more economical than such as are long and narrow.

Feeding from the entire upper surface is now considered the proper method, and the cut surface should be at least fully over the whole surface for it will be as wasteful as feeding mouldy. A rather foot of stalks is well known, it will weigh about 50 lbs. cubic, with a little concentrated food, for the daily ration of a cow in full milk.

Although some people are of the opinion that silage is not a good food for milk cows, I have found the reverse to be the case. I can quote opinions endorsed by my years experience. I usually hold up to 40 cows, and I attribute the system of ensilaging to which I adhere so strictly to the better known, and appreciated by every stockowner in New South Wales, and in new and more cows, and if it has been so much neglected in our colony, it is because it has not been well and fairly tried, which has of course been the cause of the failure. The adoption of ensilaging literally means that ordinary grasses and other crops have been observed in making, or at least recommended and effective enough as food for domestic animals.

It has certainly many advantages over the old practice of curing by exposure to the sun and air, and of storing in lofts, or in stacks, in wood or in stacks, or in pits, or in other ways, rather inconvenient. No system of ensilaging, or of silos, can be more simple than that of the silos or underground silos. Subsequently, tends with a number of cows, and a good supply of a fair amount of useful food.

The silo should be in a convenient place, the grass should be cut, and the silo should be removed from the field one day, the field ploughed and harrowed, and the field sown. On good land an early crop of barley, wheat, etc., will be ready for the silo. The land can then be ploughed and sown in rape or cabbages, and the silo should February 1 March. This plan of operation is very and practical, and I have carried it on for many years.

In 1891, during February we took about 4 tons of green maize (Indian corn), which we stored along, applying weight by using some large bags and bags. We put in the silo, and it was found to be a perfect state of preserved, it. It was cut early in the morning, and was very succulent, in their food.

Herbage, Cowpeas, or vetches, or lucerne, about 1 ton, made up of grass wheat, oats, barley and vetches, pressure being applied by means of a Johnson's patent ensilage press of 1 ton capacity, obtained at a cost of 3. The apparatus consisted of seven pieces of timber, 3 of 3 inches square, and 4 of 2 inches. The apparatus consisted of seven pieces of timber, 3 of 3 inches square, and 4 of 2 inches. Having the pressure was applied by means of a screw, and the pressure was applied by means of a screw, and the pressure was applied by means of a screw, and

PRESTON SHIRE COUNCIL.

MONDAY, JAN. 28TH.

Present:—Crs. Baylise (president), Paterson, Barrow, Nichol, Marshall, Crawley, White, Howden, and Howes.

A WIDOW'S REQUEST.

Mrs. A. E. Kupsch wrote requesting to be exempted from paying rates on property at corner of Cramer and Mary Streets, as since her husband's death she had found it difficult to provide food for her large family.—Cr. Barrow moved and Cr. Nichol seconded that the request be granted.—Carried.

On the suggestion of Cr. Paterson the secretary was instructed to look up the previous cases of exemption with the object of preventing the holders losing their land on account of not paying their rates for three consecutive years.

A "DREADFUL NUISANCE."

J. Frank, High Street, Preston, wrote regretting to have to complain of a "dreadful nuisance" appearing to arise from adjoining premises.—Cr. Howden moved that letter be received and referred to inspector for report. [Dealt with in inspector's report.]

MAIN ROAD MAINTENANCE.

The Borough of Ararat wrote asking co-operation of this council in an effort to get the Government to make immediate provision for the maintenance of main roads now that the subsidy has been so largely reduced.—Cr. Marshall moved and Cr. White seconded that the matter be referred to Cr. Paterson the representative of the council in the Municipal Association.

ANALYSIS OF MILK.

Frederick Dunn, public analyst to the shire, wrote giving results of analysis of 8 samples of milk which had been forwarded to him by private purchasers. One contained an amount of added water equal to at least 3 per cent., 1 contained 2 per cent. of added water, 1 passed the "limit" allowed, and in the remaining 4 samples no change had taken place which would interfere with analysis.

THE CAMPBELLFIELD BRIDGE.

James Ryan, Secretary Shire of Epping, wrote requesting to know what steps had recently been taken with regard to acquiring the land for road leading to new bridge over Merri Creek at Campbellfield.—The president said he had had several interviews with Mr. Hingston, Mr. Cantlin's new agent, and he said he would write home to Mr. Cantlin on the matter and communicate with him (Cr. Baylise) as soon as he got a reply. —Letter to be sent to Mr. Ryan conveying this information.

AN AMBULANCE.

The Secretary of Eppingshire wrote conveying the information that the Health Department kept an ambulance which was at the disposal of municipalities free of cost, that is without horse or driver.

Cr. Barrow thought if they could get an ambulance on such easy terms it was not worth going to the expense of procuring one for themselves.

The president said he thought the idea was to localise it and have it handy.

Cr. Barrow—It could be got in half an hour—that ought to be handy enough.

The matter then dropped.

CHEAPER CARRIAGE.

The Shire of St. Arnaud wrote requesting co-operation in an endeavor to get the cost of carriage of wheat reduced 25 per cent., as was recently done in South Australia, until the price shall have risen in Melbourne to 2s. 9d. per bushel.

THE COUNCIL'S PATRONAGE.

Rev. J. Marriott Watson wrote applying for use of park for a moonlight fete for the Ladies' Benevolent Society on the 6th inst.; also asking the council to grant its patronage to the event.—Both requests were granted, the first on the motion of Crs. Howes and Paterson and the second on the motion of Crs. White and Barrow. Cr. Paterson remarked that it was understood at last meeting that the Reading and Recreation Rooms would give way if an application were made on behalf of the Ladies' Benevolent Society.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Cr. Barrow submitted the report, recommending as follows:—

1. That accounts amounting to £29 4s. 2d. be passed for payment.—Adopted.

2. That a refund of £1 be made to W. Aitken on account of Lot 5 which had not been proceeded with.—Adopted.

PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

Cr. Paterson submitted the report, which recommended the passing of accounts amounting to £21 10s.—Adopted.

2. Re Percival Street drainage.—That, in the interests of the public health, it is necessary that Percival Street should be drained, and recommend that the following scheme be adopted:—Channel north side of Percival Street and carry drainage southwards to the south boundary of the block, thence eastwards into the main drain. That the necessary land be taken to effect such drainage, the width to be three feet; and that plans and specifications be prepared and notices served on the owners of property abutting thereon and benefited by such channel.—Adopted.

Cr. Howden asked if the whole of expense was to be borne by the people on the north side.

Cr. Paterson said that all property owners abutting on and benefited by the channel would have to pay.

BUILDING COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The report which was read by the secretary, stated that the work was now being pushed on with vigor and they hoped soon to be able to report its completion. A progress payment of £80 was recommended.—Adopted on the motion of Crs. Paterson and Marshall.

Clause 2 reported the completion of the fence and outbuildings in a satisfactory manner, and a final progress payment of £32 5s. 9d. was recommended.—Adopted on the motion of Crs. Paterson and Marshall.

Clause 3 recommended the passing of a cheque for £7 7s. to the architect for plans and supervision in connection with the new fence and outbuildings.—Adopted on the motion of Crs. Paterson and Marshall.

Cr. Paterson (chairman of committee) said he was pleased to report that since last meeting the contractor had been making good progress and he fully expected to be able to report the completion of the building before long.

The president—I'm very pleased to hear it.

ENGINEER'S REPORT.

Mr. Stewart reported having prepared plans for the drainage of the east side of the lane between High Street and Clifton Grove.—Referred to works committee.

Clause 2 recommended the calling for tenders for maintenance metal for the year.—Referred to works committee.

Clause 3 reported the completion of two contracts; also that only 3 daymen were now employed.

SCAVENGER'S REPORT.

Mr. Heron reported that Mr. Lane was misusing the corporation night cart.

Cr. Barrow—What is Mr. Lane doing with the cart at all.

The engineer said he had allowed Mr. Lane to have the cart for one day only to remove some rubbish, but he never dreamt of him having such a cheek as to keep it. (Laughter).

The president—Dost let him have it again. (Laughter).

Clause 2 reported that he had taken the place complained of by Mr. Frank, it was Seeber's butcher's shop, about which he found nothing offensive. Mr. Barlett, the owner of the property, had visited the premises which had existed on the vacant land at the back by making a brick drain.—Received.

ORDINARY BUSINESS.

Cr. White moved that the daymen be put to fill up with metal the worst of the ruts on the Epping Road, as far as Mahoney's gate.—Engineer to attend.

Cr. Howden asked that the engineer put the daymen on to effect some improvements at the intersection of Edna and High Streets.—Agreed to.

Cr. Crawley called attention to the charge by the Metropolitan Board of Works of 5s. per head for cows. He considered this excessive and would be glad if their representative (Cr. Baylise) could get it reduced.

The president said the regulations in regard to this matter were adopted, but if they were alterable he would do his best to have it done.

Cr. Howes also thought an effort might be made on behalf of gardeners and dairy-men in connection with the charges where large quantities of water were used.

The president said that this matter had been very much considered, and it had been decided to adopt a uniform rate, as it was felt that if distinction were made it would work badly.

Cr. Howden thought that as the council had been instrumental in getting cheaper gas the Railway Department might be prevailed upon to use a little more of it on the stations, which were now kept, between the trains at any rate, in almost total darkness, placing strangers and even residents in a very awkward position when they arrived at night-time. He moved that a letter be written asking for more light at the stations.

The president sympathised with the motion. The other night it was so dark at a station that he could not recognise one of his own children. (Laughter).

Cr. Barrow seconded the motion, which was carried.

Cr. Howes said that in speaking on the finances at the previous meeting he had said that the rates during the current year would amount to £1700 [Cr. Paterson having another appointment retired at this stage.]

PROPOSAL FOR MONTHLY MEETING.

Pursuant to notice, Cr. Howden moved—"That, with a view of curtailing office expenses, it is advisable that this council in future meet once a month in place of once a fortnight, as at present." The mover said his idea in bringing the matter forward at this stage was to put them in a better position to deal with the officers' salaries.

The president—This question has nothing to do with that.

Cr. Howden thought it had. He did not think the change would be detrimental to the shire as had been stated, and the saving would be more than trifling. Other municipalities in a better position than Preston were carrying on their business by monthly meetings, and he did not see why they could not do it. Sometimes the meeting only took an hour and a half and surely councillors could sit double that if need be once a month. The work done in the shire was much less than it used to be and therefore there could not be so much work for the officers. Oakleigh and Dandenong managed by letting the secretary attend at the office three days a week. They had to face vast reductions in the Government subsidy. They had a good ship, but she was drifting, and if they did not take care she would soon be on the rocks.

Cr. Howes seconded the motion. Once a month, he thought, was plenty often enough to meet. If anything urgent cropped up the secretary could summon them together.

Cr. Barrow rose to oppose the motion. At present they only met 26 times a year, and he considered that those who only desired to meet 12 times had no right to represent the people at all. (Oh!) If any material thing in the past, I must ask Cr. Howes to withdraw it.

Cr. Howes—Well there is too much spent in law. The secretary should not have such length of tether in this respect. He thought the council might look on for a cheaper firm of solicitors. The motion, however, could stand over for a while.

Cr. Barrow again rose for the purpose he said of "clearing away this little bogey," but

The president again ruled that he had no right to speak, as "there was nothing before the chair." He would have an opportunity at next meeting.

The president—Have you any more motions, Cr. Howes?

Cr. Howes—Not to-night, Mr. President.

The president—Thank you. We will now adjourn.

A WARNING TO PARENTS.

[TO THE EDITOR.]

SIR,—Will you kindly permit me through your columns to draw the attention of parents in this town to the greatly-growing evil of allowing girls to be on the streets after dark without any protection, or anyone to see that they return to their homes when the business on which they were out is finished.

It grieves me to see nightly, girls, from 12 years of age upwards, hanging about the street corners or even sitting in the door recess of unoccupied shops with young fellows who certainly have no character to lose, and who care not a whit what injury they do to the girls in whose company they are.

Fathers, mothers, awake to your duty before it is too late, and your daughters get beyond your control, as was the case in the instances before the Police Court on Monday last, when the parents of five girls had to seek the help of the law to bring unruly daughters to their senses. It is sad, very sad, when a parent has to refuse the leniency offered by the Bench, and allows a daughter to go to prison. "Train up a child in the way it should go" is the command, and surely hanging round the streets at night is not that way.

Some of these girls told their parents they were over 21 and could do as they liked. They will learn better, it is to be hoped, and when released seek an honest means of earning a living, or else they may find their way back.

The police deserve thanks for the promptness with which they acted in the matter, and if parents will only do their duty such a painful sight may not again be seen in the Northcote Police Court.—Thanking you for your courtesy, I remain, Yours, &c.,

JAMES KNOX, J.P.

STATE OF THE TRAMWAY LINE.

[TO THE EDITOR.]

SIR,—I desire to call attention to the Northcote tram management respecting the conditions of their road from the top of Rucker's Hill to the terminus at Clifton Hill, the blocks at places being worn away inches below the level of the rails, causing great annoyance to drivers of vehicles, damaging their wheels and risking serious accidents. As the Tram Co. is subsidised to keep the road in thorough repair, why in this not carried out? as, in the event of the line again closing, the council will be compelled to expend a large sum of money to put the road in necessary order for the safety of vehicular traffic, for which they are now paying to have done.—Yours, &c.,

ANNUAL MEETING OF SUBSCRIBERS.

The annual meeting of the above was held on Friday evening, January 25th, at the Library. Mr. E. Brock presided. After the confirmation of the minutes, the secretary submitted the report and balance-sheet for the past year, which were received and adopted. The report stated that the year had been fairly successful, and although the receipts had diminished somewhat, the number of books circulated was in excess of that of the previous year. The number of books circulated during 1894 was 1290, as compared with 1189 in 1893. The number of visitors was 1621, being 129 more than the previous year. The amount of money expended in books was £7 12s., making a total in the institution of 1466. The balance-sheet showed that the year started with a credit balance of 5s 6d, the subscriptions being £11 8s 6d; donations, £2 10s 7d; Government grant, £2 15s 3d; rent of hall, £2 12s; proceeds of concert, £2 19s, a total of £22 11s 3d. The items of expenditure were as follows:—Books, £7 18s; insurance, £2 3s 9d; printing, 19s 6d; gas, £1 3s 4d; salary and commission, £6 19s 6d; postage and sundries, £2 7s 8d, a total of £21 11s 3d, leaving a balance in hand of £1 7s. The following were elected committee of management for ensuing year:—Messrs E. Wood, E. Brock, H. Hanna, O. A. Walker, J. McMeikan, J. Broadhurst, I. Barrow, A. Wilson, and B. Bailey. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.

IN consequence of the great increase in Assignments and Insolvencies, the BANK SUPT STOCK REALISATION COMPANY will continue to sell all classes of Merchandise, principally Drapery, at extraordinary discounts, at 289 and 292 Bourke St., Melbourne, and 166 Smith St., Collingwood.—M. A. RAPKEN, Trade Assignee.

THULINIUS
THE GREAT SCANDINAVIAN REMEDY.

PROFESSOR THULINIUS.

MY DEAR SIR,—I feel I should be wanting in duty did I neglect the opportunity of sending you my testimony as to the wonderful efficacy of your rheumatic specific.

For the past ten years I have been quite crippled with rheumatism in all its forms. I have tried doctors and hospitals at various times of suffering, and also, I think, every patent medicine recommended and also followed the advice of sympathising friends, with a view of effecting a cure for this most trying disease. All that I have been able to accomplish thereby has been, not, perhaps, much to complain of, I may well say, though not so far as I could wish. I could only crawl about with difficulty, and are surprised at my present state of health. I was, when I last wrote to my

The Leader.
JUSTICE TO ALL.
Published every Saturday Morning.
SATURDAY, 9TH FEBRUARY.

THE LEADER, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1895.

At the Northcote Town Hall on Tuesday evening a number of gentlemen, including the members of the Board of Advice, councillors and others, met for the purpose of considering the practicability of arranging for a picnic in connection with the local State Schools. The Mayor (Cr. Yeomans) was voted to the chair. A suggestion was made that the school join with the Brunswick picnic, but this was not entertained. After some discussion it was unanimously decided that a picnic should be held, and a committee was formed to choose the seaside was fixed upon as the place of holding. Mordialloc being the chosen spot. The whole of those present were elected a committee, with power to add to their number, and Messrs. J. P. Orr and R. Robertson were appointed secretaries, and Cr. Peart (chairman of the Board of Advice) treasurer. A date was not definitely agreed upon, but it was considered that the picnic should take place about the end of the present month. Details as to the prices of tickets, &c., will be fixed, but it was understood that the children would be charged 6d. for their rail tickets and that refreshments should be provided free. The picnic will not be confined to the children alone. All who wish to participate in a pleasant day's outing are invited to join it. Donations in money or kind will be thankfully received by the Mayor, Cr. Peart, or any member of the committee. It is expected that the pic-nic will be a great success. There is no doubt about it.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

John Gallagher, a line repairer, who lived at Spotswood, came by a sad end on Monday night last. John Ritchie found his dead body on the rocks at the foot of the cliff on the Merri Creek, about 200 yards from the Alphington line bridge. The skull was fractured and the body otherwise injured. Deceased was 40 years of age and leaves a wife and three children. The unfortunate man was last seen by Patrick Donohoe at 10 o'clock on Monday evening. It appears that deceased had fallen in the darkness, and the fall was not in the worse for drink on the night of the occurrence, but this was not borne out by the evidence at the inquest. It was also published that the deceased was for several hours at the Bridge hotel, prior to meeting with the accident, and that he was then quite sane in a drunken condition. This is quite incorrect. Gallagher did as a matter of fact call at the hotel in the evening and after staying a short time he left quite sober with some fellow workmen for Clifton Hill.

A POST MORTEM.

The Northcote sanitary inspector having discovered what he thought to be a diseased cow in the railway reserve (which that animal had wandered, nobody seemed to know where from) Mr. Lawlor, inspector of stock, commenced operations, and he came out on Wednesday last. Taking Messrs Phillips and Angus, the local butchers, with him, in his cart he had the animal killed, and on examination it was found to be in a diseased state, suffering from tuberculosis in its worst form. The inspector said he never saw a worse case. As a diseased animal like this is liable to affect a whole herd, and through the milk, perhaps a whole community, this opportunity is taken to warn all concerned of the necessity of a close and careful watch by the authorities when a diseased animal comes under their notice.

THE FIVE "THATS."

Several school-children have sent in sentences containing five consecutive "thats," but the only correct answer comes from Olivia Parker, Waterloo Creek, who forwards the following:

"They say that that "that" that that man said was bunkum."

The following were accepted as the sentence should be sensible if not strictly grammatical.

The example in our own mind was —"The teacher says that that "that" that that boy means is the right one."

In recognition of Miss Parker's cleverness we will send her the Leader for the next six months free.

LOCALISMS.

A month or pienic to Mordialloc for Northcote State School has been decided upon. It will no doubt prove a swinging affair.

Why not run a moonlight fete for the Northcote Ladies' Benevolent Society, whose funds have given out? There ought to be £50 in it at the very least.

A handsomely-framed past-arch certificate, recently presented to Bro. C. J. Sedgwick, of the Gwala Lodge, is now in view in Mr. Hebbard's window, High street.

All Saints' (Northcote) harvest festival takes place on Friday evening next, 15th February. The preacher will be the Very Rev. the Dean of Melbourne.

Mr. Hy. Cleary, aged 15 6d on Monday as a fine for his nephew having a swim in the Merri Creek she remarked "it was a dear bath."

Northcote Electoral Revision Court adjourned till Tuesday next at 2 p.m. All ratepayers who think they wish to disfranchised would do well to read the list published elsewhere.

Bills on the cards that the Christchurch Dramatic Club from Brunswick will shortly revisit Preston in order to raise funds on behalf of the Preston Reading Rooms.

Northcote Amateur Minstrels promise "new artists and all the old favorites" at their second entertainment at the Northcote town-hall on the 26th.

It is announced that the St. Patrick's day meeting of the Thomastown Race Club will take place as usual next month.

A sale of work is announced in connection with the Wesleyan Church, Prince of Wales' Park. It is to be opened on Tuesday, 12th inst. by Rev. W. Scholes, and will be continued on the following evening. The list of attractions and other particulars are advertised elsewhere.

The Northcote Ladies' Benevolent Society for relief of the poor will meeting is convened by the Mayor (Cr. Yeomans) at the Town-hall on Monday evening, when all the best means of replenishing them. All interested in this good work are cordially invited to be present.

The Northcote cricketers have put up many records this season, and I'm going to try and achieve another by bringing off the best concert on record, at the beginning of next month. Many talented performers have already agreed to take part and the programme promises to be really first-class.

In connection with the liabilities of the Preston Reading and Recreation Rooms, Cr. Bellas and Barrow have been appointed to interview the National Bank authorities with the object of ascertaining whether they are favorable to accepting a transfer of the buildings, and thus relieving the trustees of their liability.

The W.M.A. will resume their meetings after vacation next Monday night, when a selection of officers for the ensuing year and other important business matters will be transacted. A full attendance of members is requested. Friends and visitors will also be cordially welcomed at a quarter past 8.

In his special sermon on Sunday last in connection with the death of the late Mrs Booth, the Rev. C. P. Thomas cited a most remarkable fact regarding the deceased lady's family. Mrs Booth's eldest son died at the age of 29, and when he married a lady also advanced in years. Five children were born of the union, three sons and two daughters, one of the latter dying in childhood through accident. The remaining four reached years of maturity, and were each over six feet in height. One of the sons reached 6 feet 6 inches, and was proportionate in portions. Mrs. Booth, who was the youngest child, was 14 when her father died, so that he must at least be 90 years of age.

MOONLIGHT FETE AT PRESTON.

EXPECTED TO REALISE ABOUT £40.

Cash is so scarce now-a-days that benefits for charitable and deserving institutions are experiencing much difficulty in obtaining sufficient funds to properly meet the demands made upon them. Included amongst those is the Preston Ladies' Benevolent Society, which for years past has been devoting its energies to the relief of the suffering poor—a work that should command the sympathy and assistance of all who are in a position to bestow them.

In order to provide the wherewithal for the ladies to continue their charitable work, the happy idea of a moonlight fete was hit upon by the Mrs. Murriott Watson, and so soon as the project became known a strong working committee of ladies and gentlemen rallied round the promoter and offered all the assistance in their power. Meetings were held weekly, and the enthusiasm displayed at those gatherings augured well for success, which both sexes entered into their several duties, disguised any fears entertained regarding the result, providing the weather was favorable; and when the various committees met last previous evening and reported "arrangements complete" it was felt that everything was in the assembled faces, and the morning broke up with bright anticipations of the happiest of results.

With Wednesday morning, however, came a cloaked sky and a miserable drizzle, which at first created a anxiety and much speculation was indulged in regarding the all-important factor—the weather. But when evening came the wind ceased, the moon appeared, and, after all, the night was simply perfect one for the event.

The Mr. Murriott Watson was a pronounced success is but to echo the opinion of everyone who was present. All the hard work put in by the ladies was achieved in the handsome financial result, surpassing even the most sanguine expectations, and the fact that upwards of £40 will be realised affords feeling proof of the success and thoroughness of the committee in the carrying out of their labors. About 1,500 persons entered the gates, the bulk of whom were residents of Preston, Northcote, and Northcote, with a large contingent, so also did Northcote, as indicated by the heavy train traffic. The concerts in the Pavilion and on the lighting were kept busy all afternoon, and their arrangements left no room for criticism. At the usual entrances a nice effect was produced with lanterns, but it was but still entering the park that the full extent of the illuminations was seen. At the pavilion and rounds had been a refreshment stalls a brilliant display was made with arc and incandescent electricity, of all sizes, interspersed with fairy lamps and other tri-colored lights, which combined with the light reflected at close intervals was a cordon of gay lanterns, which, when viewed from the top of stalwart pines, the effect was highly picturesque, and called forth exclamations of delight from all who entered.

Immediately in front of the pavilion a large crowd was gathered, and busy at them were—Mrs Watson, Mrs Carson, Mrs. Jameson, Mrs Crisp, Mrs Bayne, Mrs Cameron, Mrs Hood, and the Misses Cameron, McKenzie, McDonald, Sullivan, Hurlstone, Westmoreland, Crisps, and Winnest (2).

Amongst those prominent in carrying out the general work of the fete were the Hows, Carson and Adamson, and Messrs Slade, Williams, Buckhouse, E. A. Walker, Smart, Stanlake, T. Paterson, Jameson, Mrs Crisp, Buttner, Crisps, Cameron and Wharlay, not forgetting the secretary, Rev. Marcott Watson, whose zeal and efficient work in the matter could not be excelled.

An acceptable donation, and one deserving of mention was between 300 and 400 candles from Mr. Robert Harper, M.L.A.

The willingness with which all contributed which they could was most gratifying to the promoters.

PRESTON R.C. CHURCH.

GRAND CONCERT.

Seeing that Wednesday was such a bright-cold day for Preston it might have been expected that the attendance at the above concert would be affected in consequence, but it did not turn out so, as we have seldom seen such a fine audience in the Preston Public Hall as assembled there on Thursday evening. On entering the hall one was struck at once that the decorators had been busy. The plain old hall, after their transforming efforts, actually looked quite a fairy bower for the great deal. The stage was half hidden with luxuriant pot plants, and the proscenium, which was decorated with the Celtic and Anglo-Saxon word, "Welcome," was decorated with fern leaves, flowers, and drapings of harmonious hues. Behind the stage was a large mass of ferns, the whole effect being not only pleasing but refreshing to the sight. The young people responsible for this "Something is rotten in the State of Denmark" Hall were not wanting in ability, and the tremulous atmosphere, still looks some time after the concert. It was the best but one beautiful tropical sky

The Art of Driving a Team of Horses.

(By Lord Hothfield, in "Live Stock Journal."

I can quite imagine that some sceptical person may laugh at the idea that there can be any art in what, to an uneducated, looks like a mechanical act which only requires brute force. Let him, however, try instead such an idea from practice, and he will find that it is not so easy to act in all its phases, and one that anyone can be relied on to do well. Having, then, been taught by other people, who made us sit on a coach, with the reins in our hands, and then, perhaps, to show us how and where to hit my horses. I was not allowed to use my whip until I had passed a satisfactory examination in that respect, and proved to him that I did not want to use it, and that I could make my team go as he wanted it only to want a third hand, but a fourth and fifth, and I thought I was a big boy. I pomse is entirely due to the kind but great my dear old friend, now long since gone, took in my instruction, which he then supplemented by personal demonstration as to how to put together and handle a team.

However well you may be able to handle a team, you will find it quite impossible to drive with comfort, either to your horses or yourself, unless, by the time you have learned how to putting them together, and the difference that is made by a few holes more or less in the couplings is quite ordinary. Not only that, but because your team go well one day, it is no reason why they will not want a slight alteration the next time you put them to the vehicle, or possible their leaders on account of the presence of some one whom they have not seen before, and who is sitting by you or just behind you, or spot exactly a trifling alteration which will modify any discomfort to your animals as well. I will give one instance which occurred with a friend of a near neighbour, who, with his team, is a very good whip, and drives his own team, and, I may add, he is a man of great self-leader, a man—which fields, as some of her my experiences—really quite equal to teach, and after stopping several times, and altering couplings, etc., he got further and further, and he had asked me what I should advise. Having seen the team, I suggested that he put a little pad crown, and a trifling alteration would be made necessary. As an onlooker, I saw at once what was wanted, and was thus able at a moment's notice to restore piece and harmony between the coachman and the horses, and much to the same way that I myself have been taught by a friend, and I may say that when I found it so effective I adopted it.

One of the great charms of driving is that you learn something new every time you go out, and I can safely say that in 20 years' experience, which I do not think I have ever got off it without having learnt something new and interesting on the art of driving. Of course, since the new beginner has been told the theory, he will, however, have to be put to and be worked under training the horses, as nothing will make a man learn quicker than a bad practice; and if you will hold the ribbons for some time you find, on the first occasion that you remember, that you are rather helpless—and at the mercy of your horses at first starting. A really bad beginner, you can hardly ever make a good coachman. By the time he has learnt, if he ever does, he will have spoiled by carelessness that the horses, or lose your temper, or, on the other hand, the last is, there are, unfortunately, some who, that if by any chance you are inclined to lose your temper, you are sure to be the victim of "Punch" quite to those about to get married, "Don't."

I am an advocate of hearing-reins, but they should be used only so as to prevent your horses if so inclined, from boring and increasing the weight of the reins, as, if they do, they will have, and, whenever preferred you may be, you cannot, without them, make your horses go in the proper form, and, if anything of about the streets of London. If your hacking-reins are loose, the horses will need them find no inconvenience from them, whereas those that are tightened to have had themselves prevented from so doing. I drove a pair of horses for a friend, and I remember he had not a bearing-rein on, and I thought sometimes that he had to be bored at all, but he use it first and worry if he did or had it on, and as soon as I (and which I did by a stratagem which was really the cause of his dismissal) I was careful always to indulge him with it.

How many a man thinks he can drive because he drives a well-broken team round the park, but he has yet to go to a pleasure party and take a switch team for a race meeting, and put together from a team he have never been together before, some of which want a gentle reminder from the whip, whilst the other, even hear the sound of it, and let him drive the team home, and he will be surprised at some times, and, perhaps, sadly and as concerned as car, and he will probably find that, so far from driving his horses, it is the horses that are driving him.

I have said above that any fool can drive fast or go to the Ascot race-course at a hand-canter, and think that he is another in no distant future, and that he will be able to do it, and, if he has horses of his own, he will be able to do it, and, if he has horses of his own, he will be able to do it, and, if he has horses of his own,

THE HEREDITARY CURSE.

AN AUSTRALIAN STORY.

By Marcus Clarke, jun.

Yuron station is situated in the north of Victoria, and belongs to one of those hardy, selfdials whose parents though not of Australian birth "picked up" literally speaking, in the footlos; and on their decease left properties to their Australian children, who have accumulated under the name of "squatters, wool kings, etc."

Luckily for the owner and his 30,000 acres, he had no income, and was not rolled actually in wealth, visited society in all the pomp and splendor of a twelve-pounds, while behind their backs he picked them literally to pieces.

Sir Jamison James was a member of Parliament, and whenever the House spoke of an income tax he was firmly against it. "Think of the Great Deficit! How unwise!"

If a new Government (and he was bound to be elected—not because of his brilliant ability, mean of his money) he would stand up and make a splendid speech (), and point out how the unfortunate tenants of his would suffer. Philanthropic man!

If the debate was going against him, caused, probably, by a commanding man like Mr. Alfred Irrigation speaking plainly and boldly, Squatter Sir Jamison James would telegraph his banker to instantly distribute 5-notes, in the form of cheques, for respectable sums among the charities and his tenants, to carry up here through the Press with the polling. His name would blaze forth day after day (towards proprietors' pockets meanwhile, getting heavier in political organs, and Sir Jamison James would probably be called the "Philanthropic Squatter").

Also, for Human Nature

Yuron station township was indeed a pretty place, and boasted of a church seating about a hundred, and a "school" twice as large. In fact, to call it anything else was a direct insult to the fair and festive Mike O'Kane, who swore by all the saints that his "school" wasthe finest for miles round, bogorra. This was first said to the public, but what he told the priest in another thing. For to speak plainly, the Yuron Arms was a miserable wooden shanty, boasting of one bedroom, and the wine-beer-and-brandy-was sold within its walls.

Perched up this inconvenient river flowing on that side of about a quarter of a mile, lay the Christmas Five had been built, and a wide walkway ran every day's hard work, from the station house. This troubled no little, as there was a ferocious bull-dog on the way.

As I approached the homestead I saw the solitary figure of a man coming, and I thought his name, over the gate. I recognized Saunders, the man I had come down to relinquish to get a quiet chat with this man, and here was my opportunity.

I got off the mare I was riding, and walked slowly up to where he stood.

He was evidently in deep meditation, for he apparently did not notice my approach.

Saunders was a thoroughly Englishman of some fifty years of age, tall, well-built and with a sweet smiling and wore a brown beard which was brown and there hinged with grey.

I stood at his side, and he did not seem to take any interest in him that I could hardly refrain my laughter.

The meeting of the man behind awoke him from his reverie. He started and exclaimed:

"Good-day, Saunders, I hold, and hold out my hand. After a moment's hesitation he took it and I thought to notice my attention saying:

"Well, what's the matter with you?"

"You seemed to be in deep meditation," said, "Is there trouble in the place?"

"Oh, he said, sadly, yes, you're right, sir."

"Thinking of your friends, perhaps, your wife?"

He stiffened at the mention of the last word, and I thought quickly, and before, there was a pause, and I saw he was in a fine fellow.

I pitied the poor fellow from the bottom of my heart, but he only nodded, and said it was late, and that we would not fight against that.

"The Sun is coming, I'm coming home, I'm coming home, I'm coming home, I'm coming home, the good man, the good man, the good man."

We reached the station house, and after bidding my friend a sympathetic good-bye, we what we very much in the dark.

I retired to my bunk, brooding over what Saunders had told me. Christmas morning Yuron station, from the big wheelwright to Yuron station, from the big wheelwright to the "boss," was bringing home a wife, and squatter's treat in the shape of a Christmas dinner.

Christmas morning dawn, and I was up early to see the preparations. The dinner was to be served in the dining-room, and I was to be the guest of the occasion.

I had decided to only all night on the strange story of Saunders, and I thought, I could not help feeling that a fatality was going to overtake.

I was just making my way under Saunders' crib, when I was met by our black roustabout, Pallamagnus, who was a Kanaka.

It is a fitting time to describe the black-skinned son of Australia. Black Billie, as he was called, had been employed on the station for a number of years as general hand, and, right or wrong, he was, especially treating stray cattle.

Black Billie was a native of Yuron, and he had been brought up on Yuron station, and was a "boy" of the same place, and he was about 50 years, and he had been brought up on Yuron station, and he

INDUCTION OF THE REV. A. F. FERGUSON.

The Presbytery of Maryborough met on Wednesday in the Presbyterian Church, Donald, to induct the Rev. A. F. Ferguson. The Moderator of the Presbytery, the Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Dunolly, presided, and after praise and prayer the Rev. Mr. Robinson, of Birchip, preached the induction sermon. Thereafter the Rev. Mr. Vance, of St. Arnaud, solemnly inducted the new minister to the pastorate of the church at Donald.

The Rev. Mr. Ferguson, who was born near the foot of the Queen of Scottish lakes, is the youngest son of the late Mr. Hector Ferguson, rector of the Islay Grammar School, and brother to the Rev. Hector Ferguson of Northcote. He took his arts course in Glasgow University, and thereafter in the Presbyterian College, Edinburgh, where he finished his theological studies.

THE EVENING MEETING.

At 8 o'clock there was a very large number in readiness at the Presbyterian Church to welcome the new pastor, the church being very tastefully decorated. Members of the different churches in Donald were also present, and altogether Mr. Ferguson must be gratified with the hearty and genuine greeting he received.

The Rev. A. F. Ferguson said he felt that he belonged to them now, and he did not feel any strangeness towards them. Neither did he feel strangeness in accepting the charge, for it was not the first occasion on which he had occupied such an important position. Shortly he hoped to meet them in their own homes, and then they would become intimate and know each other much better. He felt the Lord had sent him to Donald, and he believed his labors among them would be blessed. He felt with them that he was in his proper place in Donald. God had sent him or he would not be there. He had been in America and he loved it, but he loved Victoria more. He had had excellent prospects there, but he had been directed to come to Australia. He had come to Donald to act under the orders of the Great King with the co-operation of the congregation, and with Divine assistance he hoped they would move forward together, but they never could grow strong together unless they were led by the love of Christ. In conclusion, Mr. Ferguson humorously told his hearers that one advantage of his being a bachelor was that instead of being compelled to love a wife alone he was able to love all the members of his congregation. He hoped if they saw him in a white coat they would not think him unorthodox, for he could assure them he was terribly orthodox. They could, however, depend on one thing—he would always preach to them the story of Jesus and His love. The conclusion of Mr. Ferguson's speech was greeted with loud and continuous applause.

The Rev. M. Robertson (Birchip), the Rev. Mr. Thomson (Dunolly) and the Rev. Mr. Vance, also delivered suitable addresses, which were interspersed with singing, the meeting subsequently closing with a vote of thanks to the visiting clergymen.—Abridged from the Donald Express.

[TO THE EDITOR].

SIR,—A petition signed by a large number of interested ratepayers of the Central Ward was presented by Cr. Campbell at the last meeting of the council asking for the erection of a lamp at the intersection of Hawthorn Road and Eastmont Street. In your report of the meeting it is said that a councillor queried whether such a lamp was necessary. If that councillor will walk down Hawthorn Road from High Street through up Eastmont Street on a dark night I have no doubt he will be convinced even if it were against his will of the necessity there is for a lamp at the corner of the said Eastmont Street which is both narrow and dark. It is hoped that the matter may be considered urgent, and that the surveyor be requested to report the matter to the public works committee as soon as possible. Yours, &c.,

THE PROPOSED PRESTON TALLOW FACTORY.

[TO THE EDITOR.]

SIR,—I see that a Mr. Collins has given notice of his intention to apply for a boiling down license abutting upon Oakover Road and a considerable distance away from any population. It being currently rumoured that sentimental objections will be raised against granting the license I made it my business to visit an adjoining shire, viz., Beaconsfield, and whilst there inspected the premises of Tyrrell Bros., butchers, and found that they had just killed 20 lambs, 14 calves and 11 pigs, and 10 minutes afterwards no one, however good a nose he might possess, would know that any killing had been done on the premises, which premises are situated in the centre of the township. Some few years ago Mowling and Son paid upwards of £4000 for land in Oakover Road with a view to the erection of a candle and soap factory, the estimated total outlay being little short of £10,000. This industry, which would have paid out in wages alone £10,000 per annum, was lost to the shire through the vacillating policy of the council. Are we going to allow the same suicidal policy to be carried out in this instance. Any one with a grain of common sense knows that the conditions of the Health Act are so stringent that (assuming the health officer does his duty) it is utterly impossible for any noxious industry to remain a nuisance or a menace to public health. The existing industries are a credit to the place, be they termed noxious or otherwise, and the more we get established in suitable localities the better for every body who has a vested interest in the district. Yours, &c.,

RESIDENT RATEPAYER.

The Reason Why

MACKENZIE'S is a good shop to buy your Boots and Shoes:—
Because they give solid wear.
Because he has a good stock to choose from.
Because his prices suit the dull times.
Because his Boots and Shoes are made from selected material.
Because his goods are well put together and firm.
Because he gives you first class value.
Send on your repairs
Because he uses good leather and charges reasonable, and
Because it will pay you to go there.

The Address is W. MACKENZIE, Boot Warehouse, Plenty Road, South Preston, near corner of Bell Street, and don't you forget it!

THE GREAT SCANDINAVIAN REMEDY

"THULINIUS"

PROFESSOR THULINIUS.

SIR—For the sake of others I should be wanting in duty did I neglect the opportunity of sending you my testimony as to the wonderful efficacy of your rheumatic specific.

For the past ten years I have been a complete martyr to rheumatism in all its forms. I have tried doctors and hospitals at various times of suffering and also, I think, every form of advertised remedies, and also followed the advice of well-meaning friends, with a view of effecting a cure for this most trying disease. All that I have been able to accomplish thereto has been, at best, temporary relief from pain. I am well known, and covers can testify that at best I could only crawl about with difficulty, and are surprised at my present agility in getting about from place to place. After leaving Little Bay Hospital, on the close of last year, I was persuaded to try a bottle of your "Thulinius," and in a week or so afterwards I could get "out" fairly well, even again. but as last I determined to try a course of Thulinius as I have just completed my fourth bottle, with the gratifying knowledge that I have not felt a twinge of pain, nor any reasonable distance without fatigue, which is an excellent expectorant, and is again conspicuous to frequent my profession, added to which my old-repeated attacks of pleurisy have become things of the past. I have not dieted myself in any way, so all the credit is due to your wonderful remedy, under Providence, that my blood is becoming purer daily, and its effects upon my liver and kidneys most pronounced. I send you with this the date of my previous attacks and sufferings should you wish to advertise them. I shall only be too glad personally to convince fellow sufferers of the benefits to be derived from a course of your treatment, as exemplified in my own case, otherwise yours sincerely.—I remain yours faithfully

W. H. NELSON NEWSAM,
Teacher of Elocution, and music, Fitzroy-street, Fitzroy.

The Rev. A. D. FASSON, St. Phillip's parsonage, Fitzroy, writes the enjoyment of my life. Now I am free from pain, and can do my work as I did prior to his taking "Thulinius."

JUSTICE TO ALL.

SATURDAY, 16th FEBRUARY.

ANOTHER most instructive lecture ever heard at the Northcote Town Hall was given by Mr. Thwaites, engineer-in-chief of the Metropolitan Board of Works on Friday evening last. Sufficient proof of his intimate knowledge of his subject may be found in the fact that a large audience followed attentively what the lecturer had to say and show for three solid hours. Friday evening was not the most pleasant indeed, either. As a lecturer Mr. Thwaites does not go in for the oratorical, but he is lucid and interesting, and very soon conveys the impression that he knows what he is talking about. Having first quoted a very ancient aphorism that "for the health of the people, you must have pure air, pure soil, and pure water," Mr. Thwaites proceeded to deal with his subject under these heads. First taking water, he gave an interesting sketch of the Melbourne water supply from the year 1854, when a supply of 13 million gallons daily was at command, to the present day when 60 million gallons can be poured into the city every 24 hours. In developing the scheme there and half a million sterling have been spent, but if the public in the past had not been absorbed in the general revenue, the capital would have been reduced to £2,400,000. As regards the quantity supplied, Melbourne was almost unique amongst cities in not charging for it, while paying double the rate, had to go on short commons. In Melbourne they had the freest use, but only had to pay half as much as Adelaide. In Sydney the rate was the same as here, but vacant land had to pay a rate of 2d in the £1, which was not the case with us. While Melbourne was in the van with regard to its water supply, the wonder was, said the lecturer, how it lagged so far behind other cities, and especially its sister capitals of Adelaide and Sydney, in the matter of not having a proper sewerage system. Such a lack, he considered, was a blot on the escutcheon of Melbourne. Capitalized, the loss of power sustained by Victoria, as a consequence of the increased number of deaths due to defective drainage, amounted to no less than two and a half millions sterling annually. A brief history was then given of the metropolitan sewerage system: its main features were explained, and details and illustrations given showing how every house and street would be dealt with. The progress so far made was also described and a very graphic idea also given of the magnitude and elaborateness of the undertaking. As the Mayor afterwards remarked the audience had been placed in close touch with a matter they were rather densely ignorant of before. The lecture concluded with a large number of gruesomely shown limelight views, which brought the whole subject of water supply and sewerage before the eye, as the lecture had done before the ear, of the audience. A vote of thanks to Mr. Thwaites, moved by Mr. Craven and seconded by the Mayor (Cr. Yeomans), was carried with hearty acclamation.

We will be almost inclined to fancy the millennium has been reached when masses of household and factory drainage such as now find their way into waterways like the Merri Creek are scientifically disposed of instead of contaminating and fouling the summer inn in a sluggish "open sewer," rendering pestilent the atmosphere of a whole neighborhood. Anyone who has occasion to cross or go near the creek at present must be impressed with the indescribably offensive and a menace to health. Several cases of fever have occurred and these will assuredly be multiplied if remedial measures are not taken. It is an outrageous state of affairs, that all the municipalities interested might well imitate the fabled Hercules and set about the task. By even improving matters the various councils would earn the goodwill of a grateful and more healthful public.

Mr. Steane, the town surveyor, having reported that the extinguishing of street lamps at 12 o'clock would mean a saving of £30 or £40 a year, the public works committee on Thursday evening recommended that all lamps be put out at that hour, so that this saving might be effected. Cr. Pearl was strongly averse to being let in for such a saving, and, hour, and moved that the lamps be kept alight till the least past 12, by which time the good persons who attended the revival meetings, the wicked people who went to pantomimes and theatres, as well as all those who had been spending a social hour at their homes or elsewhere might have a chance to get home. Cr. Smith seconded the amendment. He did not believe in the metaphysical refinement of cavil and sending all the ratepayers to bed at 12. There was a good deal of jenny wisdom and pound folly in the idea, as, after effecting a very small saving, it would be the means of driving such ratepayers as had no relish for coming into a "dark and dismal hole" late at night out of the place. Cr. Hutton deprecated spending £40 unnecessarily on what was a mere luxury. Starting at 12 o'clock was a fair hour, and on Monday an application was granted by the Preston council to allow the use of the parks for a match between two friendly societies.

To-morrow the annual harvest thanksgiving service will be conducted at the Northcote Wesleyan Church, when special sermons will be preached by Thurgar, Scholes, Adamson, and Angwin respectively. The church will be open to the public the following evening, for which a really good programme has been arranged, including the rendering of "The lost chord" (with piano and organ accompaniment) by Mr. Hughes. It was awarded the gold medal at the musical competition held in the Melbourne town-hall.

Proceeding from the consideration of a petition for a application to establish a tollow Society at South Preston was not entertained by the shire council at Monday evening.

Mr. J. E. Crowle's courtesy for the erection of the Preston cricketers' pavilion "cannot be too highly commended" by the architect (Mr. Birtwistle).

Mr. C. Stewart "respectfully informed the council that he cannot possibly give a requisite amount of supervision to the works of the shire now in hand, the time has been reduced to two days a week.

Mr. James Birtwistle, architect, invites tenders for the completion of the Preston Public Library Hall (at risk of former contractor).

Preston District Cricket Club intend holding a moonlight fete at the Preston Park early in March in aid of the funds of the club. The committee meet to make arrangements on Tuesday evening.

Angles in the Darebin creek report some nice loads of trout, etc.

Anniversary of O.S.T., Preston will be celebrated by a concert in the public hall on Tuesday evening, the 26th inst. Particulars are advertised elsewhere.

The Northcote council's bankers have offered to reduce the rate of interest to 4 per cent. In these days, when everything else has fallen in value, Cr. Pearl thinks 4 per cent. is a fair enough charge for money lent to a municipality.

The Very Rev. the Dean of Melbourne conducted the harvest festival service at All Saints', Northcote, last evening. Notwithstanding the continued to-morrow, when persons so desirous will have opportunity of seeing the beautiful decorations.

There was quite a difference of opinion amongst Northcote councillors at Monday evening as to whether the cemetery in Separation street was a public or a private one. Evidence to settle the former contention was, however, the stronger. It was decided to inform the proper quarter that he had bought a couple of layers" there.

On Saturday, 2nd, the residence of Mr. Stephen Gilbert road, together with its entire contents, was destroyed by fire. The water being some 2 miles off, the council do little else than stand by and see the place consume. The property was insured in the Royal British.

The cricket craze seems now to have affected all classes. Side by side with the Northcote Leader Benevolent Society's annual cricket match on Saturday, the local brickmakers were entering enthusiastically into a game of cricket on Monday application was granted by the Preston council to allow the use of the parks for a match between two friendly societies.

To-morrow the annual harvest thanksgiving service will be conducted at the Northcote Wesleyan Church, when special sermons will be preached by Thurgar, Scholes, Adamson, and Angwin respectively. Arrangements in connection with the Northcote children's picnic to Mordialloc are being pushed ahead as speedily as possible and the event promises to be a big success. Thursday, 7th March, is the date fixed, that being the only suitable day a special train could be secured. The return fares are wonderfully cheap, namely—children, under 14 years, 6d; up to 21, 9d; adults, 1s. 6d. Free meals will be provided for the children, for which no extra charge will be made, and there will also be a programme of amusements provided. The train will leave Middle Northcote shortly before 9, or soon after the 8.20 train from Preston passes through, which will afford parents and children in that locality an excellent opportunity of securing a splendid day's outing at a very nominal sum. The committee to have the cemetery in the day proclaimed a public holiday, providing the local shopkeepers are favorable to such a course. Already a fair amount has been collected, and further contributions, either in money or kind, will be gladly received by the following gentlemen:—Cr. Yeomans, Bastings, Pearl, and Messrs Tobin, Orr, J. J. Smith, and Evans.

NORTHCOTE TOWN COUNCIL.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14.

Present:—Crs. Yeomans (mayor), Bastings, Campbell, Dennis, Candy, McIntosh, Smith, Rapken, McLeod, Hutton, Bagley, Pearl, Thompson, and Marks.

STATE OF WESTBOURNE GROVE.

W. A. Bowman, M. H. Kinsman, E. Bowman, J. Kennedy, J. E. Burrows, M. M. Owen, and L. J. Bowman wrote drawing the council's attention to the unhealthy state of the street channel adjacent their respective residences. Westbourne Grove, especially at the level crossing over Rucker Street. They requested that the street be more frequently swept and that the culvert be periodically cleansed.—Reply to be sent that as much attention as possible would be given the channels in the future, so to avoid any nuisance.

THE RATE OF INTEREST.

The manager Commercial Bank of Australasia, wrote intimating that the time given to the town clerk on the 24th ult., that the rate charged on the overdraft account has been reduced to 7 per cent. per annum. Current rates of interest on fixed deposits having been reduced in the future to have the street lamps extinguished at 12 o'clock.

Particulars in connection with the third performance of the Northcote Christy Minstrels, to take place on Tuesday, 26th of February, are announced in other columns of the journal.

A polite way of putting it.—Sergeant Robinson, when he wanted to give the lunch an idea of the pet "record" of a prisoner up for larceny, remarked that he had "a good long pedigree."

The secretary of the above (Mr. W. G. Swift) wrote reporting that since the foundation of the library there had been 15,729 visitors and that a sum of £295 had been expended in books, maintenance, &c. There were over 500 volumes in the library, embracing all classes of literature, together with periodicals, which now it was only right that the public should have a fair share of the library, the committee now approached the council for the first time for a grant of £30 to cover the cost of lighting of the institution.

Cr. Candy moved that the committee's request be complied with. As the institution was for the benefit of the whole town it was only right that it should be subsidised from the general funds.

Cr. Pearl seconded the motion. The institution was evidently much appreciated, and should be encouraged in every direction, and in feeling proud. Seeing it was for the public use, he considered the commission with the request for a grant was in order.

Cr. Thompson said that while sympathising with the request, he thought it only right that the matter should be referred to the finance committee.

Crs. Dennis, McLeod and Bastings, though likewise, and on the motion of the latter, seconded by Cr. Smith, the matter was referred to the finance committee.

REQUEST FOR EMPLOYMENT.

George W. Brooke thanking the mayor and councillors for the kind and liberal assistance rendered to relieving his illness, and also informing them that he was now able to work, and would be very thankful to be reinstated in his former place.—Referred to public works committee.

LIGHTING FOST OFFICE STEPS.

The Acting Postmaster-General wrote requesting to know if the council would be proposed to extinguish the lamp opposite the colonnade of the post office, which the council offered to have lighted, provided the department paid the cost of gas.

The mayor explained that this letter came as the result of a conversation with the Acting Deputy-Postmaster-General. The Department had before refused to do so, on the ground that they did not know it appeared probable that they would do so. (Hear, hear).

PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The report was submitted by the chairman (Cr. Candy).

1. The committee recommended the passing of accounts amounting to £19 11s. 2d.

Cr. Pearl moved that the accounts be passed in full. He was thankful for giving 1s. a day extra to Mr. Carmody for the work in charge of the quarry workmen. When it was decided to dismiss one of the workmen, and increase the work of the remaining men, he was of opinion that it would be a good thing if the council could have secured the services of Mr. Carmody, who was a man who understood the wages of the foreman should be reduced below 6s. a day.

Cr. Thompson seconded the motion. The question of reducing the wages of the foreman had never been mentioned. He certainly thought all the men should be paid 6s. a day, but they had volunteered to work for 5s. a day.

Cr. Marks said the surveyor could not supervise the work properly. He could not support the increase to Mr. Carmody except all the men were paid alike.

Cr. McLeod supported the motion. The foreman was not be everywhere, and they wanted a foreman to direct the men in the absence.

The mayor said he thought he would have to rule this motion out of order. It was the duty of the committee plainly stated that Carmody was to take Brooke's place, and therefore was to receive wages. That resolution would have to be rescinded before anything could be done.

Cr. Hutton said that such minute was so good, so it was a pity it could not be carried for confirmation.

The Mayor—The council has confirmed the committee's recommendation subsidised in that minute.

Cr. Pearl said that as seconder of the resolution in the minute referred to he would say that the matter of wages was not mentioned.

Cr. Pearl intimated that he would give notice of motion that the resolution of the full committee be rescinded.

2. Re painting and varnishing down Town Hall.—The Town Hall.—The following tenders have been received:—D. C. Wright, £8; R. H. Chester, £6 17s. 9d.; T. Halliday, £5 15s. 6d.—The Committee recommend that the tender of Mr. R. H. Chester be accepted, he being a ratepayer of the Town.—Adopted.

3. Re petition for a gas lamp to be placed at Hawthorn Lane and Eastmont Street.—The Committee recommend that no more gas lamps be erected this year.—Cr. Campbell moved that this clause be dealt with under order of the day No. 3.—Agreed to.

6. Re right-of-way from Westbourne Grove to Clarke Street and west of Railway.—The Committee recommend that no action be taken in the matter, as it does not require to be constructed at present.—Adopted.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Cr. Thompson, in the absence of Cr. Hoothby, submitted the report, recommending:

1. That accounts amounting to £50 16s 6d be passed for payment.—Adopted.

2. Town Hall Stage.—It is recommended that the plan as prepared by the Town Surveyor, providing for an increase in depth of 4 feet and width of 2 feet be approved and the Public Works Committee authorised to invite tenders for the work, the increase in depth to be movable, the width to be permanent, estimated cost of alterations, £12.—Adopted.

ORDINARY BUSINESS.

Cr. Candy moved that tenders be invited for the supply of the Mayor and Walker and McLaughlin streets.—Agreed to.

Cr. Candy moved that the mayor and members for the south ward wait on the Public Works Committee with a request for the construction of a street alinting on the railway between Clarke and Westbourne Grove, and the construction of a street alinting on the railway between Clarke and Westbourne Grove, and the construction of a street alinting on the railway between Clarke and Westbourne Grove, and

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

A SOCIAL STORY.

By H. H. Chapson.

CHAPTER X.

"I admit you made good your point," said Dr. Barton, "that the enforcement of trade union principles would benefit the working class, as it would secure to them a larger share of the national income. But those which are free from foreign rivals the effect must be all to their advantage. But I think we are where you're going to stop. Would you go on, so invention are applied, to confiscate the restrictions of the home of income?"

"Why not?" replied Blake. "Improved processes now affect the worker disastrously. In the long run he gets a small advantage by the reduction in price, but the displacement of labour increases competition and makes it more difficult for him to find employment even at a lower wage. In your proposal, or rather the trade unionist proposal, would simply give to the working class a large proportion of the gain due to better processes of production. It would make those appliances labor-saving in the true sense. The idea to be aimed at is that when a machine is introduced that enables one man to do the work of ten, instead of nine men being thrown out of employment, all of them should get some share of the benefit of the working shorter hours. Is that unreasonable or Utopian?"

"It's very nice indeed from the working class point of view," Barton admitted, "but what about foreign competition?"

"I'll deal with that now," said Blake, "and be commonest to read.

There is no sensible man who does not see the enormous advantages of Protrade-ism the abstract. Our complete foreign manufactures at a incentive build to-ment on the question comes simply from nature. To take an extreme case, as one of an illustration, cocoanuts can be grown in England—in hot-houses, of course, but that is only a matter of margin approach. It would be commercial to do anything in the world, and yet it would be better to import cocoanuts than to raise them. The reason is that we should raise coal and iron in England, and exchange the products, with the rest of humanity, for cocoanuts grown in Spain, Sicily or Portugal—means, then, the underlying principle is that the labor of the producers of iron create most readily, we are all in favor of it.

I we come down to the actual facts of foreign competition, we find that the foreign article beats the home-made one, for one of three reasons either because the foreign country is not by climate, geographical position, or other natural causes, in a position to that kind of production, or because the trade is not carried on with sufficient capital, or because the labor employed is either, or, in the worst case, both. Though we have equal natural advantages and equal skill, yet we find that the foreigner is greater than it is in the competing country. Protection is unconstitutional; it would cause the production to take place in countries where conditions involve waste and misapplication of capital and labor—as with our hot-house cuppers. In the second case, Protection would put a premium on incompetence and laziness on the part of the some producers; it would be a premium on incompetency to subsidize bad work. It is on the last ground that trade unionists advocate Protection.

A trade union must fixing a standard of minimum wage. It says you must pay, let us say, a penny a week at least, though you are a liar; if you pay more than that you like for special skill and industry. In this shifts the incentive for competition, from any rate, all the employed are to be employed. It means that all employers are to be compelled to pay the same wages, and that the employer who can do the work cheapest, and reduce at any cost, the cost of production, will be the most successful. Now, I ask you, how does this work in practice. Employer A, a man of average ability, can spend a week to his average hand. Employer B comes along, and learns of some man of ability, see that there is a fortune in selling boots cheaper for a year hands 2s a week less than A does. B calls this "enterprise," but he forgets that A must now reduce wages by 2s. because B has lowered the price of boots. The result of competition goes on between employers until replace with machine of a lower price, or the fashion of your native population, which, in the case of boots, means that the boots will be in the worst event, quotation itself upon the commodity on a foreign market. Now, I say, Whatever are this may be, the result, however, does not effect the any point of the question. The question is, Is it better that the minimum objective be the maximum of employment, or the maximum of production, or the maximum of employment at the cost of production? Is it better that the worker should be the maximum of a machine, or the maximum of a machine? Is that unreasonable or Utopian?

AGRICULTURAL

A Good Butter Cow and a Good Cheese Cow in One.

Professor Collocks, of the Vermont Experiment Station, in an address before the Ayrshire association at its annual meeting in New York, referring to the much mooted question whether a good butter cow was also of necessity a good cheese cow, said such thinking examples as the Ayrshire cow could be found every year or so that may be called a cheese and butter cow. The cow Isabella, bought from Mr. L. B. Lewis during the year, gave 7,000 lbs of milk, averaging 3.9 per cent. Extraction, per cent, cream and skimmed milk, which would make 300 lbs of butter. During the same time the Jersey cow Ida, yielded 5,000 lbs of milk, averaging 5.1 per cent, fat and 4.9 per cent. casein, and although Ida made more butter than Isabella, and sold at the same price. The two cows then, so far as the butter value of their milk is concerned, were practically even, and if the milk of each had been made into butter, and sold at 20c per lb., the receipts should have been identical. But if the milk from the dairy, as it should, had been made into cheese, we should have obtained quite a different set of figures. According to the best light obtainable at the present time, each milk as was produced the Ayrshire cow would make 1cwt.3 qrs of cheese, for each 100lb of milk; that given by the Jersey would make 1cwt.0 qr of cheese for each 100lb. of milk, and that given by the Ayrshire, and the Ayrshire, and both from the Jersey, the cheese made from the Jersey will be richer than that from the Ayrshire, but an investigation was made of prices on the Boston market seems to indicate that the market price would be practically the same, or at the outside the richer cheese would cost an eighth of a cent a pound more than the other, and, if Ayrshire milk is used for cheese, it is indicated by figures more for a cheese because it is richer.

Estimating the Weight of Pigs.

There is an satisfactory way of arriving at the weight of living pigs by measuring and using anyone desirous of trying it can measure the pig in question, and then by a little calculation, which is done by measuring the girth just behind the shoulder, and the length of the animal from the top of the shoulder blades to the part of the tail which is square with the buttocks. Then multiply the girth by the length and the product by 2.9, and this is supposed to give the weight in stones of 14lb. Mr. Cullen, of Ballycastle, has not been found reliable as estimating the weight of pigs, but he has found the weight to much more than that arrived at by the measurement, and in the case of halfbred pigs of course it is less. He before now to be alive the pigs alive and then dressed from 10 to 20 per cent. for offal. It would pay, he thinks, to sell pigs alive, now possibly give offal to the butcher, and the butcher would be enabled to make a fair profit, and the consumer would pay for pork, which, of course, he gives as little as he can. Pigs should always be fasted for twenty four hours before weighing, and care should be made for a bottle of food as well as the pail. The mean time the pigs should be given of fasted pigs of from 20 to 30 lbs. Well-bred pigs, the better they feed, the better they are called the percentage should.

The Best Dairy Cow.

It is often a matter of what the breed may be, so long as the cow gives plenty of rich milk continuously or at least from 10 months to 12 months. The cow is that one which breeds regularly, feeds well, and gives a good flow of rich milk for 10 to 12 months, and yet is not little she is not worth keeping. It is perfect folly to keep a Lancaster, and her real cost, if she gives a poor return in milk, simply because she may be attached in any place she may be called her breed. A mongrel cow sometimes may be an excellent milker, and very profitable to keep, but the majority of good cows come from herds that have been carefully bred for the purpose. The better cows are bred to breed. The ancient breed of Shorthorns are splendid milkers, but Jersey and Ayrshire are more, and they show annual for that. The best which turns most of its food into milk and fat will be found for the dairyman. It is a butchers beast.

Devonshire Cider, and How to Make It.

In order to make pleasant and aromatic cider, the apples must be subjected to a thorough destitute of humus. It sliced fine, the juice causes to flow freely, and yield a much powerful hydraulic press. When the apples are crushed, or cut, or sliced, it is desirable to cut first being grounds in a power-press, the cheese is then slightly relieved, the apples crushed fine after sliced, and the cheese is then pressed. The juice should be allowed to stand a few hours, according to the temperature of the weather, for the purpose of developing a rich colour and the aromatic taste. In warm weather ten hours is sufficient length of time for the juice to stand. As soon as little bubbles begin to appear on the surface, which indicates the fermentation, the juice should be racked off, and allowed to stand for a short time, the cider will possess a flavor which it never has when expressed, and the fruit is prompt. Apple seeds should never be crushed, for they impart a disagreeable bitter. The apple should be well ripened, but not in the least decayed. Apples should have the least speck of rot in it. It should be remembered that the juice of the apple is very delicate, and it

PRESTON SHIRE COUNCIL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 11TH.

Present:—Crs. Bayliss (president), Crawley, Marshall, Paterson, Nichol, Howse, Barrow, White and Howden.

SUBSIDY.

The Under-Treasurer wrote, forwarding account for £426 15s 5d, being proportion of the amount (£50,000) of endowment to municipalities payable for half-year ending 31st December, 1894.—Received.

A CRICKET MATCH.

W. J. A. Cullis, secretary King's Own Lodge, Preston, wrote asking for use of Preston Park to play a cricket match with Boyne Lodge, Fitzroy, on the 25th inst.—Granted, on the motion of Crs. Barrow and White.

THE ALLEGED FIRE BOARD CHARGES.

The Town Clerk, Fitzroy, wrote asking if the council could inform him whether Mr. M. Lynch had been charged £22 for attendance of the brigades at fire as stated in the dip of 15th January.—Mr. Lynch had been applied to for the information.

THE AMBULANCE.

The Secretary Central Board of Health, wrote stating that this council could have the use of ambulance for infectious cases free on condition that the ambulance is properly cleaned and disinfected afterwards.—Received

MAIN FOR GILBERT ROAD.

Joseph D. Gilbert, G. I. Snyder, J. T. Oliver, John Matthews, Thomas Thompson, and T. Wainwright wrote requesting the council to take the necessary steps to have a main laid along Gilbert Road, as the present private service was altogether insufficient for requirements.

Cr. Crawley said the request was a most reasonable one, and as the revenue derived from the street for water amounted to £40 there would be no difficulty about the guarantee.

The president said the proper course was to make an application to have the street reticulated and an officer would be sent out to report. They could rely upon it that he would give his hearty support to the application when it came before the board.

C. Crawley moved that such application be made.

Cr. Marshall seconded the motion, which was carried.

TALLOW MANUFACTURER'S LICENSE.

Isaac Collins wrote making application for a noxious trade license to manufacture tallow on premises to be erected on the south side of Cadover Road.

The managers London Chartered Bank, Fitzroy and Northcote (Messrs E. Smith and G. F. Major) wrote protesting against the granting of the above license, as in their opinion such action would have a depreciating effect on all the surrounding property, in which their institutions were largely interested.—To be considered with inspector's report.

USE OF NEW HALL.

B. Bailey wrote on behalf of the executive of the Preston Free and Circulating Library, making application for the use of the public hall on the evening of the day on which it is to be opened for the purpose of holding an entertainment in aid of the funds of the institution.—To be considered when building is completed.

A CONTRACTOR'S GRIEVANCE.

P. Lavelle wrote demanding the sum of £2 which he alleged was due to him in connection with a contract, and threatening legal proceedings if it was not paid over in 14 days.

Cr. Paterson said the public works committee had gone fully into the correspondence and accounts concerning the claim, and had come to the conclusion that Mr. Lavelle had been paid the full amount owing to him.

The letter was received.

THE POSITION OF THE ENGINEER.

C. Stewart, the council's engineer, wrote informing the council that during the term of his previous engagement at £150 a year for 3 days a week he had, as a matter of fact, attended to the shire work 4 days a week, and, in addition, had had most of the plans prepared at his town office. In the present limited time he was employed by the council he saw no possibility of giving the requisite amount of supervision of the works of the shire. If, therefore, there were any shortcomings in the work done, the council would know the reason why.

Cr. Paterson—We may as well—and better—have no engineer at all as employ one only two days a week.

Cr. Howden rose to state that the matter had been dealt with at last meeting.

Cr. Paterson—That does not prevent me entering my protest against it.

Cr. Barrow thought in view of this new information the matter might be reopened.

The president said he was always prepared to give every facility in discussion and not stand on strict technicalities, but he could not allow this question—which had been decided by a majority at last meeting—to be reopened except in a proper way, which was to give notice of motion that the resolution be rescinded.

No councillor giving such notice the matter dropped.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The report was submitted by Cr. Barrow, recommending that accounts amounting to £31 19s. 11d. be passed for payment.—Adopted.

PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The report was submitted by Cr. Crawley, recommending—

1. That accounts amounting to £75 15s. 10d. be passed for payment.—Adopted.

2. That, in the temporary absence of Mr. Dredge, Mr. Stewart be appointed acting treasurer.—Adopted.

3. That notices be served in connection with the construction of a channel between Gordon Grove and High Street to carry off the drainage.—Adopted.

4. That tenders be called for maintenance metal (as advertised elsewhere).

Cr. Howse thought it would be well if the contract time could be extended, so that the stone-breakers should have employment for as long a time as possible.

Crs. Barrow, White and Paterson, having shown the impracticability of this the clause was adopted as it stood.

ENGINEER'S REPORT.

Mr. Stewart asked for authority to call tenders for the construction of a channel between O'Keefe Street and Lambert's lane.

Cr. Nichol said that the place as at present was a menace to health. He moved that tenders be called.

Cr. Howse seconded the motion.

Cr. Barrow thought the matter might stand over for a few weeks.

Cr. Nichol said he would be quite agreeable if all other works are delayed.

The president—What will the work cost.

The engineer—About £35.

Cr. White opposed the expenditure, feeling the financial position the members for the central riding refrained from bringing forward works quite as important as this one.

Cr. Howden agreed with his colleague.

Cr. Nichol said the work was passed before the end of the financial year, but it had been allowed to stand over.

Cr. Marshall would support it on condition that he would get a little job in Station Street also promised (certainted to cost £12) carried out.

Cr. Barrow understood the policy of the council was to carry out none but urgent works.

The motion was carried.

HEALTH OFFICER'S REPORT.

Dr. Wilkinson reported four cases of scarlatina, the origin of which he had been unable to trace.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

Mr. Horton reported a nuisance near Mr. Schwartz's dairy at the corner of Jesse and Bell Streets—some pitching was wanted.

Cr. Paterson thought if the channel were cleaned out it would meet the case.

Referred to engineer for temporary attention.

ORDINARY BUSINESS.

Cr. Howse asked that the engineer give some attention to the footpath on the north side of Dundas Street.—Agreed to.

Cr. Marshall drew the attention of the inspector to the fact that the footpath in Gilbert Road was at present being used for vehicles instead of pedestrian traffic.

The president expressed the opinion that £30 a year was a paltry amount to pay the inspector for the many services he rendered.

Cr. Howse said he had some other matters to bring forward in regard to office expenses, but he would wait till the secretary returned.

The president complained of the nuisance caused by flocks of geese. He considered they were far more objectionable than wandering cattle and horses and hoped the inspector would try and minimise the nuisance.

Cr. Nichol suggested "potting" the geese as a remedy. (Laughter).

Cr. Howden asked for an improvement to the crossing in Raglan Street at the rear of King and Godfree's.

Cr. Barrow—It has been an eyesore for a long time.

The engineer—The crossing is a private one.

Cr. Barrow said he would then move that the property-owners interested be called upon to abate the nuisance. Seconded by Cr. Paterson and carried.

Cr. Bayliss asked that the police be instructed to prohibit men and youths bathing in the Darebin Creek. At present ladies and children could not go near it on account of this objectionable practice.

Cr. Paterson quite approved of such a step being taken, and it was agreed to.

The president said he had interviewed Mr. Hingston re acquiring land from Cantlin's estate for bridge approaches and he was quite favorable, and had written home to Mr. Cantlin in support of the council's request.

Cr. Barrow complained of the character of the reports made by the inspector with regard to noxious trades. Any disinterested person, who had heard the report read that night, could not, he thought, but come to the conclusion that it was one-sided. Not a single objection of any kind had been raised. The inspector should be thoroughly unbiassed in dealing with such matters.

The president, while he would regret it to attribute the slightest motive to the inspector, agreed with Cr. Barrow that he had appeared in his report more in the light of an advocate than an inspector. He should, in future, rather confine himself to reporting as to the suitability of the locality, &c. than giving his own personal views.

Cr. Barrow said that several ratepayers in the special area whom he had met were evading the registration with regard to the night service. He hoped the inspector would look them up and see that they paid their dues.

Cr. Howden said he would like to know what stage the arrangements for the construction of Jeffrey street had reached.

The acting secretary replied that notices had already been served on the owners.

Cr. Barrow, referring to the recent conference between the representatives of Northcote and Preston councils, asked if anything had been done in the matter of providing litter beds.

The president said that the Preston council had denied any necessity for litter beds. The Preston man took the matter up vigorously, and he understood that with his arrangement the Northcote council were now satisfied.

Cr. Barrow—That is all right then.

CRICKET.

SPORTS DEPOT MATING TROPHY.

NORTHCOTE v. MALVERN.

The above match was continued at Croxton last Saturday. The visitors had made 272 with the loss of 6 wickets, and a further stand was expected, but the remaining 4 only added 8, mostly byes and leg-byes, and in their second innings their batting, with two exceptions, collapsed altogether. The bowling and fielding of the local team was in marked contrast to that shown on the preceding Saturday. Buckley opened with a maiden to Fowler. Coomber bowled from the opposite crease, and Fowler softly poked his 4th ball into the slips. 7—05—273, Christian followed, and got a single off Coomber. Another maiden to Buckley and Coomber with his second ball bowled Farneaux. 8—0—276. Scott was next and 3 leg-byes were run, bringing Christian opposite Coomber, who bowled him. 9—1—279. Crouch was next, and after getting a smart-run single off Coomber, was bowled by Buckley. 10—1—280. Being 20½ behind the Ass'ers followed their innings, Coomber and Buckley opening to Scott and Ballantyne. The game was very slow, Ballantyne doing all the scoring, and when both batsmen appeared set, Buckley got a yorker past Scott. 1—3—285. Fowler joined Ballantyne and at 34 W. Hayes and J. Jenkin were put on, the latter catching Ballantyne off his own bowling. 2—36—09. Dunlop followed, and after vainly trying to get the ball over the fence, he got a hit, and was stumped by Freeman. 3—1—7?. Beattie came in and was out bowled first ball. 4—0—77. Coote came next. Buckley replaced Jenkin and his fourth ball shattered Fowler's wicket. 5—33—77. Furneaux followed, and Coomber replaced Hayes, bowling Coote with the last ball of the over. 6—3—80. Christian came next, but lost Furneaux, who was caught and bowled by Buckley. 7—2—85. C. Crouch followed only to see Christian succumb to a splendid one-handed catch by W. Hayes. The Malvern being two men short, this closed their innings, leaving the Northcote winners by an innings and 310 runs. The return match on the Malvern ground will be commenced to-day.

The following are the scores:—

NORTHCOTE.

First Innings	...	582

MALVERN.

First Innings	...	272
Second Innings	...	86

Bowling.—W. Hayes, 6 for 65 (number 5 for 8); Buckley, 5 for 94; Coomber, 2 for 11; Jenkin, 1 for 12.

Malvern v. Northcote.—This match will be played at Malvern to-day. The Northcote team will be chosen from the following:—Buckley, Dredge, Coomber, Hayes (2), Jenkin (2), Newham, Jewkin, Freeman, F. Lambley, Ewing and Ahern. Cabs leave Town Hall 1.45 p.m. sharp.

THULINIUS THE GREAT SCANDINAVIAN REMEDY

PROFESSOR THULINIUS.

MY DEAR SIR,—I feel I should be wanting in duty did I neglect the opportunity of sending you my testimony of the efficacy of your rheumatic specific.

For the past ten years I have been a complete martyr to rheumatism in all its forms. I have tried doctors and hospitals to various times of suffering, and also, I think, every form of advertised remedies, and also followed the advice of well-meaning friends, with no permanent benefit. Hearing of your cure, I was urged by friends to try it. I have been able to accomplish a fortnight's hard work, at least, temporary relief from pain. I am well known, and medical men have told me I should be a cripple for life. Your specific has surprised and astonished me. I am able to go about without crutches or stick. After having left the Royal Hospital as the case was pronounced incurable, I was persuaded to try a bottle of your "Thulinius," and in a short time afterwards I could walk without pain. Before again suffering a relapse last February, I took another bottle, with an equally successful result; but as I feel determined to go through a course of treatment, I have just completed my fourth bottle, with the gratifying knowledge that I am now free from pain, can walk any reasonable distance without fatigue, have an excellent appetite, and feel myself again competent to re-enter my profession, added to which my oft-repeated attacks of pleurisy have become things of the past. I have not dissed myself in any way, so all the credit is due to your wonderful remedy, under Providence, that my blood is becoming purer daily, and its effects upon my liver and kidneys most pronounced. I send you with this the date of my previous attacks and sufferings should you wish to show them. I shall only be too glad personally to convince fellow sufferers of the benefits to be derived from a course of your treatment, examples in my own case after ten years' martyrdom.—I remain yours faithfully

W. H. NEWTON NEWMAN,
Member of Election, and treasurer of Friendly Society and Manager, The Rev. J. D. Ramsay, St. Philip's Church, Sydney, writes:—"I have much pleasure in testifying to the original state of Mr. Newman's health."

REMEMBER THE POOR.

WHILE not many just now have more money than they know what to do with, the great majority are very far removed from actual want and sit down to three good meals daily and clothe themselves with comfortable raiment and indulge in the ordinary pleasures of life as a matter of course. Still there is always a minority—"the submerged tenth"—who are not so happily circumstanced, who, instead of enjoying the experience above-mentioned, have to struggle hard to obtain even "daily bread." Some, indeed, cannot do so much as this, and charitable organisations have to come to their assistance. Since its inception the Northcote Ladies Benevolent Society has relieved many thousands of such hapless cases, and at no time during its existence has there been greater demands upon its resources than now. The substantial balance the financial year was commenced with, together with subscriptions received since, has all gone in relieving poor cases, and the ladies themselves practically without funds with which to continue their good work. In these circumstances a public meeting was called, and remembering the great success of the weekly subscription scheme—by which £187 was raised in 3 months a couple of years ago—the meeting thought they could not do better than put the same plan into operation again. Canvassers were appointed for the various wards to obtain subscriptions. The first to complete their work are Mrs. Marks and Thompson, who were appointed for the west ward. In that spacious-settled division they found no less than 76 persons who were benevolent enough to contribute sums of from 1/ to 10/ a week for a period ending 30th September next. This will bring in at least £95, a week. Such a result should be an incentive to the canvassers in other parts of the town to proceed with their work thoroughly, in which case it is certain that a very substantial regular income will be secured for the society during the winter months. There can be no doubt but that all who can see their way will do their best to help this good work, and they may rely upon it that their contributions will be judiciously expended in assisting the aged, sick and infirm in our midst.

THE PRESTON PUBLIC.

The Preston public will be pleased to hear that the arrangements for the appearance of the Christchurch Amateur Dramatic Society are now completed. The company will appear in the four-act drama—"Not Guilty," on Friday and Saturday, March 22nd and 23rd, at the Public Hall, South Preston. The piece selected is full of stirring incidents, and as the company has been strengthened by the inclusion of several new performers of undoubted histrionic ability, the good impression left behind at their first appearance in Preston will no doubt be strengthened, and those who had the pleasure of witnessing the production of the "Ticket of Leave Man" will doubtless take advantage of the opportunity of seeing the company in a new piece. As this production, like the former one, is to assist the Preston Reading and Recreation Club in its difficulties, there is no doubt that the public will heartily support the entertainment.

LOCALISMS.

It has been decided by the authorities of All Saints', Preston, to hold a grand garden fete at the Preston Park on Wednesday, March 6. Amongst the attractions announced is a Mounted Infantry Brass Band, and the exhibition of limelight views, so popular at the recent moonlight fete will be repeated. Juvenile patrons will be entertained with Punch and Judy and a Merry-go-round and there will be a sale of gifts and refreshments.

Arrangements in connection with the children's excursion to Mordialloc are progressing favorably. The tickets have been obtained from the Railway Department and will be on sale next week. Some of the members of the Council of Advice are canvassing once more for prizes with great enthusiasm. Mr. Smith alone having collected 26 odd remnants the Embroidery and Fancy Work Committee, a gentleman who considers he can render service in making the necessary arrangements will be gladly welcomed on the committee.

AN OLD MAN ASSAULTED.

An old man named George Leslie, 70 odd years old, living at the rear of Doolan's blacksmith's shop, Pierce Road, Preston, was brutally assaulted on the night of the 2nd inst. It appears that he lives alone and that on the evening named his hut was entered by a man who dragged him out of bed by the leg and afterwards beat him about the head in a most ferocious manner. His face was so badly cut that Dr. Williamson had to apply stitches in several places. The old man is known to have some money, and had a good deal in his possession at the time, but the thief, fortunately, did not get his hand on it. A pocket book was picked up close to the scene of the assault, bearing the name "Peter McNaught," and he is strongly suspected of being the perpetrator of the deed. The matter is now in the hands of the Criminal Investigation Department.

THE MOVE-ON CLAUSE.

[TO THE EDITOR].

SIR,—Up to the present I have refrained from referring to an evil which the police could easily put down. I refer to the congregation of youths and those of an older growth, at the inlet section of the principal thoroughfares in Preston. These gatherings usually occur between the hours of 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. The principal rendezvous is the corner of Bell Street Road and Bell Street, commonly called Howse's corner. Last Thursday evening the crowd was so dense that pedestrians had to take to the road. If this sort of thing is to be allowed, respectable people (especially females) had better remain indoors, as, in the vicinity of the crowds, the language usually indulged in is, as a rule, simply disgusting.—Yours, &c.,

AN OLD RESIDENT.

BURGLARY.

On Sunday afternoon last a daring burglary took place at the residence of Mr. Alexander Hamilton, of Clarke-st., Northcote. Entrance was effected through the front window, which is only a few paces off the street, along which there is considerable traffic. Only a few minutes elapsed between the thieves not satisfied with carrying off a lot of jewellery, smashed almost everything in the place. Amongst the articles stolen was a valuable brooch set with 16 diamonds, a diamond ring, and some electroplated cutlery. Two men were seen leaving the place about 5.30, of whom the police have a description.

EPPING SHIRE NEWS.

After lying dormant for some years, during which time nearly all trace of its constitution were lost, the Epping Public Library was galvanised into new life in the early part of last year, principally through the laudable efforts of Cr. Newton. A librarian was appointed at £5 a year, the books sorted up, and a catalogue printed, and the thing given a fresh start. A report called for by Cr. Morgan, and read at last meeting, showed that during the first quarter ending 31st July, 54 persons had visited the library and taken out 91 books. Amongst these there were 3 subscribers and the cash received £1 2s 6d. Since this first burst of popularity, interest in the institution has apparently flickered and died out. The subscribers and receipts have become "smaller by degrees and beautifully less" till they have during the present quarter got down to 1 subscriber and only 6 visitors have fallen to 20, or considerably under 2 per week. The president (Cr. Barry) found a sufficient excuse for the falling off during the last quarter in the fact that during the harvest months people in the country have no time to read. It was decided to keep the library open till the end of the librarian's term, in the morning and evening, for a period of a no more encouraging nature than they have been, the council will be reluctantly compelled to close the library.

Two applications were received by the council on Monday for the position of pound keeper, viz., Martin and Bent dog and Thos. Ryan at 1s a dog. The former, being the lowest, was accepted, and Mr. Martin was made an ex officio of the council with a nominal salary of £1 a year.

The Borough of Ararat sought the co-operation of the Epping Council on Monday in getting the Government to provide a suitable site for a railway in the shape of a grant for the maintenance of main roads, which were being cut up by the heavy traffic, and which at present competing with the railways.—Cr. Morgan thought it useless to make such a request, since it would be the object of the Government to drive traffic off the roads rather than encourage it to remain.

In order to be on the safe side it a panic does occur while any festivity is going on at the Epping Shire Hall it was decided to comply with a regulation of the Board of Health providing that the entrance doors shall open outward. At present the doors opened inward and the engineer is to see to their alteration forthwith.

The live stock in the Shire of Epping is estimated as follows:—Horses, 852; cattle, 4,293; sheep, 22,215; sheep, 11,000; pigs, 1060.

At the last sitting of the Epping Police Court, Jas Dea proceeded against L. Scanlan for the recovery of £42 1s 6d for goods sold and delivered. An order was made for the amount with the usual costs.

NORTHCOTE AMATEUR MINSTRELS.

THEIR NEXT PERFORMANCE.

The band of youthful entertainers, describing themselves as above, made their second appearance at the Northcote Town Hall on Tuesday evening next, the 26th inst. On its merits the previous performance was three hours of good, clean, healthy fun free from anything objectionable. On this occasion, with a strengthened company, better programme, and more thorough rehearsal they promise improvement in all points. If this is so the result will be altogether satisfactory. The company is now completely equipped in any organised. It has its interlocutor and "endman," its banjo and its serio-comic, its tenor and its baritone, its comedians and its dancers, to say nothing of its stage-managers, musical director, treasurer and business-manager, &c. The first named is called "Our evening party," will consist of songs, serious, comic, and serio-comic, interspersed with the customary jokes and conundrums, and will conclude with what the programme describes as the funniest finale ever written, "Reading under difficulties," by Bert Patey and Carl Hermann. Following this Bert Patey will sing "Tom Tom," and Bert Patey and Carl Hermann will appear in some of his Irish songs and dances; and the curtain will ring down on the second evening's programme. The previous performance was held at the Northcote Free Library, the present is to raise funds for the purchase of a grand concert at the Public Hall on Tuesday evening, 26th inst.

Bro. Tedasco, one of the superintendents of the juvenile tent, Preston, complained at the last meeting of the I.O.R. of being annoyed with ill-behaved and impudent youths congregating in the porch of the hall during the progress of the juvenile meetings. Oftentimes it was difficult to transact their business owing to the unseemly conduct going on inside the porch, to obviate which Bro. Tedasco moved a resolution to the effect that the hall committee consider the advisability of doing away with the porch altogether. Perhaps if Sergeant Robinson could be induced to do his share in further action would be unnecessary.

"Advertising is an eloquent and effective salesman—distinguished from the verbal salesman in this, that while the latter talks to one customer the advertising salesman is talking to thousands."

HARVEST THANKSGIVING SERVICES

ALL SAINTS', NORTHCOTE.

Harvest Festival was celebrated on Friday evening, 15th, and Sunday last at All Saints' Church, Northcote. As usual on these occasions the church was elaborately and tastefully decorated with flowers, fruit, vegetables, wheat, and other kinds of the produce of the earth. The excellent samples and the large quantities of the various kinds of the gifts of nature were well worthy of the rich harvest with which we have been blessed in this colony this season; and also reflected favorably upon the people of All Saints', who must have been in a grateful and liberal mood when they supplied them. A word of praise is due to the decorators. The church showed just a great amount of labor had been bestowed upon it, and then the decorators had used the most of what had been placed at their disposal. The church was well filled at all the services, and the singing was good and the sermons appropriate. At the Friday evening service the preacher was the Very Rev. the Dean of Melbourne, and on Sunday the vicar (Rev. C. J. Prince) occupied the pulpit. The Dean, in his sermon, said the offerings given to the Northcote Ladies' Benevolent Society to be distributed to the poor of Northcote.

NORTHCOTE WESLEYAN CHURCH.

The harvest thanksgiving at this church has come to be looked upon as one of the events of the year amongst the local churches. Ever since the church was established no pains have been spared to make the display of the gifts of the earth as complete and striking as possible; and this year the traditions of the past were well maintained. The church, which is, perhaps, so elaborately mounted as on one or two former occasions, but it has been more plentious and appropriate. Great credit is due to those who planned and carried out the arrangements, which transformed the interior of the church into a bower of beauty of the harvest-field.

A large congregation assembled at each service, especially in the evening, when the church was crowded. The morning service was conducted by the Rev. S. Scholes. Before proceeding with his sermon he spoke a "parable" to the children. Their lives, he told them, were gardens. God had sowed the planted therein—the truths of the Bible and the teachings of Christ—and they should be watered by prayer. The fence of "watchfulness" should enclose the "garden" and the "watch-dog of conscience" should guard the gates—then, the enemy, sin, little dreaming of the Enemy gaining admission to and despoiling the garden. An effective, earnest, and practical appropriate sermon was afterwards preached to the adults. Hymns were sung, viz., 15 and 3, and in which a graceful tribute was paid to those who had so liberally contributed to the church's naked eye. The president of the Old Colonists' Association (Mr. Anderson) who presided, then addressed the audience for their liberal patronage, and also thanked the singers for their services in getting the concert up. Proceedings were brought to a close with the National Anthem.

"Here and here," said Stephen, "CAN'T you see?"

The speaker was a broad-looking man, with a face of that type which is called "Roman" from its fashion of nose or peculiarity—he wore a "Roman" nose, and it was, in fact, the old English gentleman, "to the full extent of the word," and his hair was white, and his eyes were fixed had many visitors and many admirers.

The parson—generally known as the Rev. Stephen Lawson—was a big, fine-looking man, with a good deal of the "Roman" in his face, rather, slightly stooping, fair in color, and with a pleasant, kindly, though quick and an expression of mingled reflection and benevolence. He was, in fact, a scholar, but "without" the absorption in abstract matters which generally characterises the scholar. He was a man interested in his parishioners, in his books, and it was about one of his parishioners that he was speaking.

"The Lawsons were always a difficult family," he said, "I have always felt for my head in this matter, but I have failed to make anything of it. Mrs. Lawson—Jonathan's mother—was a very good woman, and a faithful lady for him; they were always quarrelling, and Jonathan was a wild young man. The wife died early—the latter for her, perhaps—then illness supervened, and the boy was the same again. He took it very badly indeed. I often wonder what became of him, I have not heard of him for years. He was still a young man. He took it very badly, I remember."

"I don't wonder what became of him," said Mr. Gillett, rather pettishly. "I often wonder what become of half the people I know, and don't care a bit. I don't believe they have ever mentioned her name to me, I don't believe they have asked me about her once, and I gave my best years to the place, and—"

He was standing at the gate of the parsonage, and was leaning on it, and was a good specimen of the well-fed, hearty, old country-gentleman, of the type which is fast disappearing from our country-side, and which, even as a sort of centre to the beautiful, is a great loss to the country-side. Mr. Gillett was a little, fresh, ruddy man, with a round face, and a round, bright, twinkling eye, which, even as a sort of centre to the beautiful, was

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

A SOCIAL STORY.

By H. R. CRAVEN.

CHAPTER XI.

"S.W., Mr Blake." By Burton concerned, "I don't deny the possibility of your theory, even if it be flatter to the assumption that the working class is in control of the country. It would be quite practicable to keep up a very high standard of comfort and living within the borders of a State, considered on your principles, that was absolutely cut off from the foreign effects of competition from the rest of the world. I admit that the loss would doubtless be borne by the non-producing classes, not Caveigh against. But the whole point is that Great Britain is not such a self-sufficing country. I will concede, if you like, that we can do without luxuries imported for our use, and that the nation in the future will have to do silk or ribbons, lace or champagne, sugar or pate de foie gras. That would mean a great change in our habits, but, I presume, you count tea, coffee, cocoa and tobacco, sugar and spices among the basic necessaries, and these must come from abroad or be foregone. Further, we can't live food our people by our own products. I have ready to some figures for you on the point. In 1893 we imported the following: number of millions of pounds worth of different kinds of food, and consumed were the standard of living and British of wages are mostly based upon the cost of our own—Cereals, 35; flour, twelve; butter, twelve; cheese, three; poultry and eggs, four; fish, two; meat, twenty-eight; vegetables, four; milk, one; fruit, three; partly heavy total."

"I admit your figures," responded Blake, "and, if you like, will double that total as representing the amount of food we must import in this country."

"Now," resumed the doctor, "you say that some proportion of these things could be produced here, but is the climate and the tropical product—and with the bulk of the articles of food . . . and that must all be paid for by our own exports. Those exports must be paid for . . . at prices fixed by competition of other nations in the markets of the world. It is a steady loss enough to manufacturers to get rid of their commodities in those markets, and, I believe, it is, generally, even at the present comparatively low wages and hours of our cutting competition will hands, iron-workers and miners. If we attempt to compete by greatly increased expenditure in the prime of British labor, the result is our exports fail. You can't have your cake and eat it. Nothing but well fed employment, no four favourable rent, no high wages, no short hours trade. But there will be nothing then to exchange for these foreign products. We could only purchase them by drawing on our capital, and the consequent drain would soon bring all your pretty schemes to a dreadful end, never least, any of your female tackle the subject of the question.

"I have, though," said Mortimer, "I have seen a number of Fabian tracts, and, too, technical about it is a nothing by a man who industry and Trade, and I think the disappearance of the export trade. Your M.P. extend the matter very quickly, I can say, on, 'the export trade can be spared and fair wages, and short hours, ought to apologize, Miss Burton, for repeating the price of the articles we exchange.'

"I don't mind the expression," said Mrs, "but if he means that the exports have done, but the means of livelihood of the population of Lancashire and to provision for all he cared, there aren't words to express his idea of the matter.

"I did think say it to Lancashire," resumed Mortimer, ". . . "He was a fool, but anticipated such a fool as that. I have to the point.

"Mortimer be remembered that the form of protection which I urge—the Protection of labor from the competition of more paid labor in other countries—does not exclude all foreign imports. It only seeks to grow timber, tea, or oranges in Great Britain, or to make silk or lace, or cotton goods, or to supply our people, we can, the better, for with regard to these foreign consumers only. It is, by the way, a change, by reflection upon the necessity of Parliament as attached and practice in England, that the only things in which the prices fixed by disease should be the very things which the working classes consume. Wheat and meat hardly a workman who would not take the best of bread and take, and bacon up for the same revenue by an increase in the income tax.

"Now does my sort of protection, by any restriction upon free trade with countries where labour has less power or a lower ideal of living than it enjoys in our United Kingdom. It is the popular observation of the British Empire that it comprises within its dominions every variety of climate, and that all commodities that can possibly be required are now practically produced or produced in abundance within its confines. The local change I propose would give your Absolute freedom of trade within the Empire, even though it necessitated Protection against Germany, Belgium or Russia. I am not at the moment of discussing the political difficulties. I am stating the simple fact that every article of wheat, every bale of cotton, every pair of hose, every bushel of cereals, is produced by the labour of our fellow-subjects, grown under the British flag. The same thing is true of every other commodity we need or might, and every possible article of luxury we could desire. There are other countries in the United States is a different ruling, and, I believe, what I would be in Great Britain, because they have the close from trade, and obtain supplies from the Mediterranean, and from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Florida. The protection Mimmers is largely issues which makes the "free Empire." imagine that his country is independent of Land." Good to Johns' Grade, and from the Irish Channel to St Wade, protests, but from seeing that England has the opportunity of establishing free trade on a fairly very much larger and more varied than the United States. If it is possible to Americans, how much more is possible for the country "Rule Britannia" is the ruling the sun and keeping company with the tours, encircle the whole earth with continuous and unbroken strain of the martial air of England.

"Meanwhile the export trade must go on. If our manufacturers are to pay high wages and sell at low prices, they must, as long as they can, do it. Necessity, is added by brandies just as the manufactures of Frederstadt countries are, but it is useless to regard the present condition of the export trade as permanent. In the direction of employment of our home market, using that expression in a strictly Imperial sense, our colonies are a certain, and, I believe, work in the future. You may be sure that the effect of protection, if taken up by the United Kingdom, is vastly increase the purchasing power of the masses who are now poorly paid, and by giving a purchasing power to those hundreds of thousands of men now idle, employment, and therefore a fixed weight on the industry of the country, would be largely increase the market from which foreign competition would be shut out. In the same way the importation of corn from Canada instead of from the United States, or wine from South Australia and the Cape instead of from France and Spain, or wool from New South Wales instead of from the Argentine, and so on, would mean the increase of the wealth and population of our colonies where the staple industries of England would find an increasing and identifiable market for their surplus. There, too, under the conditions I propose, the Australian States would not meet the competition of the foreigner.

"I am conscious that the magnitude of this proposal is rather staggering, but I do not know that a political movement is any the less likely to succeed because it involves weighty issues that appeal to the imagination and to the larger patriotism. I am well aware, also, that there are two fleas in the pack. One is that the British electorate lately on means aware that the only chance for permanently maintaining high wages at home, together with cheap food, lies in the sort of "Customs Union of the Empire that I have sketched out. Without that knowledge being widely diffused the Ministry in England could contemplate the introduction of such changes in our fiscal policy. But the other difficulty is, I think, that the mass of the working class, with the exception of the royally owner, ground down by the collieries, and the Lancashire cotton lords, and pondered in the middle-man. That is, you cannot, in a country of 40 millions, with the concentration of population, which, in the middle-man, while leaving the mass of the people in the collieries company, the mines will not be produced, and the cotton lords will not be producing as all the time amongst his company. Those things will come about on England without any change in the law, in 5 years, estimate the rate at which things are moving. I am, you will agree with me.

The Coming of the Mail.

The rain came down upon the north west's parching lands

Like a fierce, fierce rain upon wide wastes of sand.

The sunless sky is brazen, and close is the atmosphere,

And the grass is dry and bare, burnt lookers nature by and near.

A blue haze surrounded the mountains: the hills are dull and brown,

And the gum-trees and the pines are the only green to be seen.

The thirsty ground, long-drained of moisture wasted, for the lips of thirsty rain

Have sucked the silvery fountains till the sky-spring is drained.

In front of the wooden structure—office and bar—I lounge

In shade of the broad verandah—some seated beside me

A motley group is waiting, and watching with I see

The galloping of a horseman over the plain.

A father is reading letters from sons who have left his roof

Or, in some instances, from daughters after or at home

Who have left the home, and are now in distant lands

Or, in some instances, they are dead.

Some are anxious, some are indifferent, some are cheerful

Some are sad, some are sorrowful, some are glad

Some are hopeful, some are despairing, some are mad.

Some are hopeful, some are despairing, some are mad

Some are hopeful, some are despairing, some are mad.

"Yes, I know my world," said Dr Burton, "and I didn't suppose you would. Your argument is Mortimer in one of his most trenchant and, I admit, effective.

"Effective, I should think it is," said Blake," said Mortimer, "and the theory is, I suppose, sound. I must admit that I have never thought of it in quite the way you put it. If I had, I might have thought better of it."

Blake shrugged his shoulders. "I don't see how you could have thought better." Mortimer: "Because, I should have seen the end of free nonsense once in Australia talking. I have seen the end of it in Victoria. He asked me if the whole of Scotland had been settled, I should say I spent more healthy sides when the future of our race from the mainland of the Australian Continent, estimate the rate at which things are moving. I am you will agree with me.

Favorite Mottoes.

During the last few days I have busied myself in taking several well-known people to tell me the mottoes they like best.

"Never Fret" is the choice of Sir Henry Hawkins, who, when I interviewed him, was when the learned judge is about to sentence a prisoner. Lord Chief Justice Coleridge's is "Ich Dien, or, in English, "Dienen."

Sir Francis Jeune, the President of the Divorce Court, selects "Nil Desperandum." "I wish I could I have never thought what is my favorite motto, or if I have one," said Sir Francis, when I put the case to him. "I was conscious of a favorite motto I should regard it made a very good and all wise men, which a wise man never tells. If I wanted a good practical work-a-day motto I should choose, I think, the old Latin "Sson enough, it well enough," and "Yield to circumstances." Lord Rosebery is fondly to wear them."

The editor of the "Standard" is resigned to fate, for his motto is "What will be will be." George H. Sims has chosen "Make hay while the sun shines." Mr Arthur Cecil's motto is "Oh, Christmas Day had come again, Is to thine heart I pray."

He saw himself all baked and brown, Upon a kitchen dish,

Then he awoke, and grabbed low, "I thought I was a fish."

Again he dozed, once more awoke, And then he slept again,

While cold winds from the icy north Swept over Hull in vain.

It chilled the dreaming turkey's toes, "Why from this bed I rise?"

Then sniffed off his lofty perch—

"It felt and looked so cold."

That Christmas morn dawned crisp and clear,

"The farmer, as his round,

Remarked to his good wife, "I think

The plump dead turkey found

Is the look it is like to be sound."

She said twas fresh and sound,

So they dressed and trussed it for the spit

For Christmas dinner.

"Yes," said the farmer, "I'm pleased to see

Thee so well, wife, and I'm pleased to see

Thee looking so well, too, Jack."

"Well, I'm pleased to see thee looking well, too, Jack," said the wife.

AGRICULTURAL

Time to Stop Churning.

A short time ago an old-fashioned dairyman, endeavoring to explain why butter made by a twenty-tramp and necessitate when referring to Cross writers, who offer advice to practical men who have been in the business "for over 1227 years." He admitted that these fellows might know better where they had lived their lives, but that was all they knew about it. «Ma Press Cows" he thought had adapted to "wreck of nature." The cow, he said, came in globules as the result of the milk secretion. They would lose all the butter with the buttermilk. His own advice was to churn on until the butter gives its decent sized lump. He did not say how large, but we may suppose there to be as large as a pigeon's egg. However, Mr. M. Wilson, expert for Dr. Lund Separator Company, who has had a wide experience, and Dr. Fjelde's experiment to travel and make butter making throughout Denmark, writes, "Stop churning when the globules are the size of pea's heads this is one of the most important secrets in butter-making." All modern teachers of better-making agree that this is the proper time to draw off the buttermilk that perhaps the man who has made butter for more than forty years knows better.

Butter and Beef

No doubt the Shorthorn cattle can be here to give a considerable quantity of rich milk, suitable both for butter or for cheese-making; but in that case it will be necessary to give up the idea of making beef of the cow when she is done for the dairy. Old cow beef is not nice any more than old ewe mutton is, and the whole system of breeding has been ruined that through generations, either for good beef or reliable milk character, and the cow in her age will not depart from that which has been bred in her, and has been cultivated for some birth. Such a cow might, perhaps, give birth to a male calf, which would be excellent as a beef animal, but would be useless in order to have large progeny the breed must be large, and a large cow requires a deal of food to support her large frame. By the end of the year that extra food would about eat up that might have been made from the sale of her calf.

Feeding Wheat to Pigs.

The North Dakota Experiment Station of the American Department of Agriculture found that with whole wheat rendered with fine meal pigs weighing about 100lb. each when the experiments commenced. It took 5.68lb. grain wheat to produce 1lb. pork under the same conditions. The offering of 1cb. of whole wheat would not pay for the grinding. Pigs fed on whole wheat showed a tendency to develop spinal weakness. These were not a little lame, and now and again a hind leg would be drawn under them, and when, on being driven, a lounge daily gain of the pigs was 1.09lb. on whole wheat and 1.12lb. on ground wheat. Ground maize gave an increase of 1.16lb. per day on each, and 1.25lb. on mixed feeds, 1.31lb. This will show that even in the case of pigs the value of the food depends upon the use to which it is put, and that it should be borne in mind that the food which is the pig's, is not the food of a cow or a fowl. Improvements it a good deal.

Reactions of Milk

The "Scientific American" publishes the following article on the novel reactions of milk:—Milk is a fluid secreted by the mammary glands of the female of the species. Milk heated to 70deg. Fahr. or upwards becomes unwholesome. Sour milk loses its nutritive value, but the reaction is prevented by the addition of minute quantities of soda. A little chloride of lime mixed with potassium iodide is a powerful reagent. Milk has been mixed with chloroform and a blue blue tound separate at the surface of the chloroform. Chloroform and Milk freed from albuminoids and sugar give this reaction. If to fresh milk there is added five drops of acetic acid to precipitate the casein, then some caustic potassa, and lastly a trace of chloroform and potassium iodide, a violet reaction characteristic of peptone does not appear. Milk from which the fat has been removed by centrifugal force also gives this reaction. The milk of a healthy cow, when fresh, does not contain peptone. A cow prone to disease and death consumptive. This is due to cow.

Agriculture in Ontario.

The Ontario crop report for 1894 has been issued, and it indicates that farmers are having hard times in that part of Canada as elsewhere. The total acreage in general is about the same, but small speaking, the cows were not up to the average in quantity of yield, and the prices received were low. The total value of the crop of 1894 was $19,000,000 less than that of 1893, and the average value per acre was $2.50 less than that of 1893. The average yield of the principal crops was 1.5 bushels per acre less than that of 1893, and the average value per acre was 1.5 bushels per acre

THE POLITICAL BOWLING GREEN.

By Scorer in Thursday's Punch

It falls as a damper on some people when they consider that the best talents of the Government are all the time being exercised on how to best fleece the people. It is a little unfair perhaps to put it in this harsh, unpromising way. But the main allegation is a verity. Even as I write, I know that the Premier is bending all his brain power to the task of sending round to me the income tax collector with the utmost expedition.

I don't say that in my case I feel at all perturbed. As a matter of fact I do not. I know that my contribution at best will be a small one, and my sole regret is that it will not be greater. It is very singular, this. The man with the small income, who is touched but lightly in the collection of the tax, wishes that he had to pay ten times more. The man of large income grumbles incessantly at the hardship of having to pay so much.

But as a matter of strict fact Messrs Isaacs and Turner are pegging away at their income tax regulations supremely careless of what you or I, or anyone else, may think or say. Their one desire is to handle the coin and put the public ledger all serene. I doubt, however, if they'll do it.

But if one set of men are supremely disgusted at the Cabinet taxes, there is another no less so concerning the Cabinet economies. The Cabinet Retrenchment Committee has been in the Post Office and the Defence Department. It has left its marks on both. Its report on the Post Office was a hundred-ton discharged in the ear of a sleeper. Mr. James Smibert is said to be dazed by the noise ever since.

All sorts of explanations are rife in the official mind to account for the sweeping nature of the Committee's report. It is something so heterodox for Cabinet Ministers to say that "idle and highly paid" people are walking about doing nothing. First of all, they tell me, the Secretary of the Cabinet Committee is a malcontent, actuated by the fell design of elevating himself by the ruin of his official chief. Another officer, brimming over with a sense of wrong, says that there is a kind of conspiracy in the Department between a couple of intelligent officers to leap to the leadership of the Retrenchment movement, and show how much better they could have done had the Department been in their hands.

But then I remark that all this presupposes that the Ministers—Messrs M'Lean, Vale, and M'Culloch—are a trinity of noodles who are the mere creatures of their own Secretary, and incapable of understanding either the weight of evidence or the equities of ordinary procedure. That is too thin—much! A baby can see through it. And yet it is the best answer given as yet to the specific charge of inflation and extravagance in the Post Office.

And yet, stay a minute. I don't know that I am entirely just. One champion of the Bureaucracy—perhaps the most able there is—I mean Mr. Caldwell, the ex-Chief Inspector—says another thing. Concerning congested and overmanned condition of the Department, he says that it is no fault of the highest official Administrator. And he gives a reason which is good, if it be only true.

And here, be it observed, comes the hint of the hidden games played in the political bowling green. Mr. Caldwell says that Mr. James Smibert has regularly laid before every Postmaster-General in turn long lists of redundant officers, and asked for authority to retire them. But in every case the Minister has refused.

Is this a fact or a fancy, or a little of both? At any rate, there the statement stands on record. Mr. Caldwell has retired on a well-earned pension. He can afford to be independent. And that is the way he lays it on the succession of Ministers who have held the reins at the Post Office.

But surely Mr Duffy, Mr. Peacock, Sir James Patterson and Mr. Wynne will have something to say to this. They all come under the charge. They have been pusillanimous and unfaithful. In the interests of the public I would keep the matter alive, so that the responsibility may be fairly traced home somewhere.

And why? Why, because I have ever found that men are mere children. The same human nature perpetually produces the same results. Three boys, say, are playing with a ball in front of my house. Out of a tussle and scuffle the ball shoots through my stained glass window. I go and catch the offenders in fragrante delicto. There is no question as to the broken glass, nor as to the ownership of the ball. They are too potent for denial, just as are the "idle highly paid" hands in the post office. How do the youngsters meet my accusation? "Please, sir, it wasn't I." "And I'm sure I never threw it, sir." "Nor I neither, sir; I asked Jim and Tom to come away out of this and they wouldn't."

There we have it in the post office. Jim and Tom, the officials, stand together and say that Harry owns the ball, and it was his fault. Or if it were not the fault of Harry the Minister, then it was the great many-headed public themselves who wouldn't let the Minister do right. There, Mr. Punch, I have given you something to hurl your pungent shafts of satire at. Let drive! Don't spare 'em!

But what are these Ministers going to say to the charge? It is quite plain that the ex-officer defends his late official head at the expense of the political heads. Mr Smibert is the diligent economical officer who has been ever keen for retrenchment. But he has been ever blocked by each Minister in turn, who lacked the courage to do right lest he might run foul of the politicians and lose the number of his own mess. That is the long and the short of it, according to Mr. Caldwell.

Everybody agrees that the Government means business at the railways, or they would not pay Messrs Whisky and Cain £10 a day to act on a board of inquiry. It seems a lot of money; but when you remember that it is only for a few months to get the railways straight again it is not such a terrible thing after all.

PROFESSOR THULINIUS.

MY DEAR SIR,—I feel I should be wanting in duty did I neglect the opportunity of sending you my testimony as to the wondrous efficacy of your rheumatic specific.

For the past ten years I have been a complete martyr to rheumatism in all its forms. I have tried doctors and hospitals at various times of suffering, and also, I think, every form of advertised remedies, and also followed the advice of well-meaning friends, with a view of effecting a cure for this most trying disease. All that I have been able to do, which hitherto has been, at best, temporary relief from pain, I feel sure, will now be acknowledgment enough to you. I feel, and can truthfully say, that a cure has been effected, and am, as a consequence, very grateful. Although I was very much prejudiced against your remedy, I was induced to try a bottle of your "Thulinius," and in a week or so afterwards I could get about fairly well. Upon again suffering a relapse last February, I took another bottle, with an equally successful result; but at last I determined to go through a course of treatment, and have just completed my fourth bottle, with the gratifying knowledge that I am now free from pain, can walk any reasonable distance without fatigue, have an excellent appetite, and feel myself again competent to re-enter my profession, added to which my oft-repeated attacks of pleurisy have become things of the past. I have not dieted myself in any way, so all the credit is due to your wonderful remedy, under Providence, that my blood is becoming purer daily, and its effects upon my liver and kidneys most pronounced. I send you with this the date of my previous attacks and sufferings should you wish to show them. I shall only be too glad personally to convince fellow sufferers of the benefits to be derived from a course of your treatment, as sorry tried in my own case after ten years martyrdom.—I remain yours faithfully

W. H. NEWTON NEWMAN.

Teacher of Elocution, and twenty-five years Actor and Manager.

The Rev. J. D. LANGLEY, St. Phillip's Incumbent, says he can verify as the original maker of Mr. Newman prior to his taking "Thulinius."
