DEBENTURE'S reply was "For ornament."
This answer though given in jest, is not very wide of the mark.
But the true explanation of why the request was made probably was on the part of the council, for something available for the £140 or so per annum they are contributing to the expense of the board. It is only human nature to get in this way, especially when one doesn't think they won't have to pay more." Cr. Thompson asked the question if it would mean increased cost to the council and received a pretty good assurance from councillors round the table that it would not, though the Mayor pointed out that it must necessarily increase their proportion of cost a little, but human nature is human nature they say all the world over, and is there not a great deal of truth in that?

THE SOCIAL LIFE OF EAST LONDON.

By Frederick Rogers.

What has been said hitherto has been applied to the English Jews. The foreign Jews belong to a totally different category. Of the same religion as their English brethren, they are yet different physically, mentally and morally alike, and they form at this moment a distinct menace and danger to English labor, and English social life.
