

A HORRIBLE HONEYMOON.

What a thing it is to have married a man who is not what you thought he was. I thought he was a nice fellow, but when I got to know him...

OUR BABY.

"What's my darling? Drink this," I said, and I poured the milk into the bottle. "It's for your baby," I said, and I handed it to her.

CYCLES, BY AN OXSTER.

(SUGGESTED BY HON. S. SOMMER ON STEAM.)

A correspondent sends us the following "poem" taken from a recent Liverpool paper, which no doubt aptly demonstrates the feelings of the "Knights of the "Halter."

Now we're to come of horses, I dunno, And we're to come of men's another question. With those ore cycles always on the go— The very slightest indication, I say, You can't say that to them, you can't say that.

GREAT SUBJECTS.

THE FINAL JUDGMENT.

But, as I have made no mention of the second coming of Christ you would probably like to ask if that event should not precede Judgment.

As a matter of fact, it is not in the life here which is the subject of the final judgment.

The Father hath committed all Judgment into the hands of the Son.

A great many good men might have been saved from writing and speaking nonsense on this subject if they had closely studied the Master's teaching on it.

Thousands of books, pamphlets, and sermons fit to cause would never have seen the light.

Imagination has certainly run wild on this one theme. Here is a mild example—'Supernatural miracle: One hundred and forty-four thousand saints caught up in one moment to the skies, amid booming trumpets, rending robes, and bustling companies.

The saints were changed and those who slept all went to Jerusalem to dwell there, where Christ will reign as King one thousand years, etc.

Such a scene, as you will perceive, is not only a repetition of what has already been said, but it is a very poor one.

It is not in the life here which is the subject of the final judgment.
