CONSTITUTION REFORM BILL.

Speech by Mr. HICKFORD, M.L.A. From Hansard we take the following report of Mr. HICKFORD's speech on the Constitution Reform Bill...

Mr. HICKFORD observed that some criticism had been passed upon those supporters of the Government who were not prepared to give separate representation to the civil service, and who intended to vote against it, because it was said that they were practically refusing to follow the principles of party government.

Further on Mr. Morley referred to the passage in Burke, in which it was mentioned that the temper of the King's children was a Member of Parliament. On that rock his whole adventure rested, his whole scheme of economy was dashed by the fact that the King's children were a Member of Parliament.

THE ROYAL HOUSEHOLD was a gigantic nest of costly idleness and purposeless profusion. It retained all the "cumbersome charges" of a Gothic establishment of another age.
