VALUE OF HUMUS IN THE SOIL.

Some important facts. The following interesting article was written by a well-known authority on all the subjects connected with the soil. It is so full of facts that it is almost impossible to believe that he can write so much in so few words.

In this article we will try and explain the thought in simple terms. It is a very interesting article and one that every farmer should read.

Humus is the most important element in the soil. It is the result of the decay of organic matter and is the source of all the nutrients that plants need.
