

THE SETTLING OF A SCORE.

By E. M. Jamieson.

Mallardine walked slowly along the bank of the river, his feet sinking into the soft mud. The water was shallow and clear, reflecting the sky and the trees on the opposite bank. He was alone, and his thoughts were far from his feet.

Wonder what he's up to? Don't like that scowl of his means mischief to somebody. The subject of Mallardine's thoughts was the man whose eyes he had just seen. He dismissed the subject of Mallardine's thoughts as he dismissed the subject of his own.

He went to a theatre later in the evening, determined to enjoy to the full the excitement of the drama. The play was a new one, and he had heard that it was excellent. He was not disappointed.

Confident To-Morrow. The woman looked at Hathaway with a quizzical sort of way as she gave him a glass of water. He drank it and looked at her with a certain amount of interest.

Moving Pictures in the Making. When you have watched the cinematograph pictures record an explosion deep down in a coal mine how do you ever wonder how the thing is done? The output of the gold mines of America, South Africa and Australia is approximately a value of $2,000,000 a day.

Where Gold Goes To. Mr. A. C. Shinkins, writing in "Harper's Weekly," deals interestingly with a problem that seldom presents itself to people outside banking circles. Although the output of the gold mines of America, South Africa and Australia is approximately a value of $2,000,000 a day, there are constantly recurring periods in which the supply of gold is found insufficient to meet the requirements of the world.

Cricket by Machinery. Will the professional bowler be abolished? The question has been asked by a writer in the "Cricket" who has considered in view of the return of the cricket ball, which is a ball of cork, with a leather cover, and which is struck by a bat.

ESAU WOOD'S STORY.

Esau Wood saved wood. Esau Wood would save wood. All the wood Esau Wood saw in the world was his own wood.

DIAMONDS IN A GRAVE.

M. Chanchard, the multi-millionaire owner of the Louvre, the great Paris store, who died recently, leaving a fortune of 45,000,000, took along with him into the grave, his body was dressed in evening clothes and laid in the magnificent tomb of the Grand Grue of the Louvre.

OLD BELLS.

There are several old bells in Scotland, Ireland and Wales. The oldest are of the quadrangular, being made of hammered iron plates, which have been hammered and riveted together.

A CONJUROR.

His mother was much cramped at the answer given by her young helper to a conjuror, which he put to her in his best Sunday manner.

ONE ON THE AMERICAN.

A native-born American, member of a party of four business men, who often lunched together, took great delight in joking the others on their foreign birth.

TRAVELLING SIX THOUSAND MILES TO COOK A DINNER.

George W. Harvey, the inventor of automatic oysters, and a former waiter at Washington, who died at Washington recently, was once the hero of an incident that was once regarded as the exploit of Lancelotti and other noted gastronomes of ancient Rome.

THE TROUBLES OF MR. ASQUITH.

Two Boston women recently returned from England, told a funny story of the troubles of Mr. Asquith. It was reported that on a morning not long since, Mr. Asquith was awakened by loud and rising voices under his window.

WOMEN AS INVENTORS.

Women, it is well known, are inventive, and according to the contemporary "Knicker" women are equally so of the sexes. Laird" said Sandy, "stayed there, Sandy McGraw phrased," retorted McGosh. "It's just the thing I do believe in. But the ladies don't have to be superior and all that."

NORTHCOTE TOWN HALL.

MOTION FOR ERECTION DEFEATED.

EIGHT VOTES TO SEVEN.

Cr. Plant, at the meeting of the Northcote town council on Monday evening in accordance with notice given, moved.

That provision be made for the completion of the main hall in any future loan issued by the council, the amount not to exceed £3000.

Cr. Plant said that nothing could give him more pleasure than to submit such a motion, for they really wanted a hall that was worthy the name of a hall, and not a place that it was criminal at times to go into. All must agree that the present hall was totally inadequate to the requirements of the town they had a population of 14,000 and the hall would only hold 300. The carrying of this resolution would not interfere one iota with the revenue of the town, they would have the same money for their streets and other improvements as at present.

The only alteration in their financial position was a reduction of their borrowing powers by £3000. As their borrowing powers were £11,837, more of the works such as the Heidelberg drainage scheme (£3000), the drain in St. George's road (£2500), Green street drain (£1000) would be jeopardized. All, including the town hall, could be put in the one loan schedule, and if they were all carried out to-morrow morning there would still be left a margin of £2000 of borrowing power; but, as a matter of fact, they would not all be carried out for four or five years by which time their borrowing power would have largely increased as every £100 increase in the revenue meant an additional £500 on the borrowing power. A larger hall was justified because of the additional business it would bring. There were many enquiries for the hall but when it was learned that it would only hold 300 they would not have it as what they could get into it would not pay expenses. They found the present hall crowded on the occasion of comparatively small socials. Such was the want of a proper hall that if the municipality did not step in and build one private enterprise would. The possibility of having to spend a large sum of £40,000 or £50,000 on the tramway road not deter anyone from supporting the resolution, as special powers were given under the Tramways Act to borrow on the security of the tramway property. The present hall was only fit for Congregational, but by spending £2000 they would have one of the best halls outside Melbourne. The additional revenue they would get would pay interest on the money. The revenue of the present small hall was £170 a year. At Prater's, with a hall to accommodate 1200, they got a return of £829. On a pro rata estimate they would get from their new hall a revenue of about £100 a year. The Fitzroy town hall, poorly situated as it is, brought in a revenue of £530. Collingwood £500, Essendon (an out of the way suburb) £246, and Nunawading £200. With these facts before them—and the figures were correct, the town clerk having secured them by his instruction from the municipalities themselves—it was clear there would be no loss, but rather a gain to the revenue from the undertaking. Considering therefore the inadequacy and inconvenience of the present hall and the excellent prospects of a new hall as a business proposition he hoped his motion would have the hearty support of all councillors.

Cr. Smith seconded the motion. Seeing they had now a population of 14,000 a hall of the kind contemplated was a necessity.

Cr. Mitchell said that though he had always opposed the building of a hall before he was going to support it now, as he recognised the present hall was insanitary and unfit to be in. When they left the crowded over-heated hall to go into the "den-houses"—(Laughter)—it was like going into an ice-cream-ber and after it he always went home with a bad cold. It was time, then, they had a hall that would prevent local entertainments being carried out of the place.

Cr. Williams said he did not think the mover had placed the financial aspect of the venture properly before them, but as far as the principle was concerned every councillor must recognize the necessity for better hall accommodation. Cr. Plant had said that the new hall would pay for the jump. They must judge of this by the revenue from the hall last year. It was only £138 18s.

Cr. Plant—I showed that for the past three years the average revenue was £170.

Cr. Williams—If they estimated their revenue on their scale of charges they estimated on a very uncertain basis. On a loan of £3000 the interest would be £160, the sinking fund at 4 per cent. £120, and the lighting £50, making an expenditure of some £330, out of £400, which, on the basis of the present revenue from the hall, would leave them with a deficiency of £176. He thought that with the extra accommodation they might get an additional £100. If Cr. Plant would show him that it was to be run on a strictly commercial basis he would be happy to support it. They would be justified in paying a subsidy of £50 for a proper hall. They put money on the estimates to provide for recreation outside and they also should care for those who took their recreation inside. If he could be assured that the new hall was a sound commercial venture he would support it, but he could not support it without that assurance.

Cr. McIntosh said he had pleasure in supporting the motion. There was no room to move in the present hall, and for a long time there had been great complaints about it. It was high time they made an effort to get a proper hall.

Cr. Archbold said he agreed with Cr. Plant's figures, but he came from a ward with hardly any metal in it. Last winter they could hardly get as bad and the south parts were just as bad. He knew the present hall was inadequate. Everyone admitted that, but was it more essential to provide a building for the pleasure of the people or to make the streets in order that they could get about? There were several important matters which should be taken in hand before they attempted to reduce their borrowing power by £3000 in erecting a town hall. Cr. Plant's revenue from Prater's was hardly fair, for there they had a population of 11,000, while we only had 14,000.

Cr. Hastings said that after careful consideration he had decided to support the resolution. The question was how the spending of £3000 on a hall would affect their borrowing powers. Cr. Plant had shown that after providing for all the big works in sight, including the erection of a hall, they would have a margin (even if the money were immediately spent) of £2000. It was a pity the red herring of the streets had been dragged across this question. They all knew that the money required for private street construction was obtained on the security of the special improvement rate, and did not affect the borrowing powers at all.

Cr. Plant—How, then, did he not build the hall if it would not affect private street construction.

Cr. Hastings—So even if they did or did not build the hall it would not affect private street construction.

Cr. Harry said he was going to oppose the resolution, as he believed it would affect street construction, more especially those streets which had been formed and channelled under the old policy and were now awaiting the metal to complete them. They could never be completed out of revenue, and it would not be fair if they did. So there was nothing but loan money to fall back upon and this objection should be met before a town hall were erected. No mention was made by Cr. Plant of a stone crusher. That also must be provided for by loan.

Cr. Plant—You can borrow for that. Cr. Harry went on to say that it would be good streets and not a grand total that would induce people to settle here. Though he agreed that the present hall was not at all as it should be he would have to vote against the resolution.

The mayor said Cr. Plant had put the matter very well from his point of view, and he would congratulate him, but he was going to vote against the motion. He put the Heidelberg drainage liability down at £5000, and in addition to the works enumerated by Cr. Plant there were such works as the raising of the channels on the east side of High street and in Rowley's road, which he estimated would cost about £2000, which would bring the expenditure up to £12,000, or something above their borrowing powers. For this reason he thought it unwise to spend £3000 in the building of a hall. As he had been already pointed out there were other works more urgent. He said this though he used the town hall a lot and had to put up with its discomforts. Further, he was of opinion that the hall, before its building and furnishing was completed, would cost £4000. And the contemplated increase of revenue was something mythical, as extra upkeep and attendance would have to be set off against it. Certainly they could not stand any addition to their ordinary expenditure as the overheads have year after year increased by £817 16s 11d and now stand at £1417. They must take no risks of increasing their overdraft.

Cr. Lees said he was in favor of the resolution because he believed it was a sound commercial proposition. The necessity for street construction was like the power, something that would be always with them. If they went on for the next 30 years the same excuse would be raised. The ratemakers were credited with expressing their opinions pretty freely, but he had not yet been represented by the ratemakers which he represented for expressing the sentiment as to a new town hall built. Sooner or later they must have a town hall, and he believed the figures put forward by Cr. Plant were genuine figures. The present hall was a most unpleasant building to be in. He always felt he was sucking in microbes by the million—(laughter)—and if a window was opened there was a draught. A year ago it was said there was no money for parks but now councillors were falling over one another in order to get hold of them. The same "no money" cry was now being raised against the erection of a proper hall. He had met people who objected to live in Northcote because there was no place to go and get a night's amusement.

Cr. Dennis said he did not feel quite satisfied to accept Cr. Plant's figures re the loan monies. He (Cr. Dennis) opposed on the hustings any expenditure on the town hall for the next two years, but he understood then concerned every councillor must recognize the necessity for better hall accommodation. Cr. Plant had said that the new hall would pay for the jump. They must judge of this by the revenue from the hall last year. It was only £138 18s.

Cr. Mitchell—I showed that for the past three years the average revenue was £170.

Cr. Williams—If they estimated their revenue on their scale of charges they estimated on a very uncertain basis. On a loan of £3000 the interest would be £160, the sinking fund at 4 per cent. £120, and the lighting £50, making an expenditure of some £330, out of £400, which, on the basis of the present revenue from the hall, would leave them with a deficiency of £176. He thought that with the extra accommodation they might get an additional £100. If Cr. Plant would show him that it was to be run on a strictly commercial basis he would be happy to support it. They would be justified in paying a subsidy of £50 for a proper hall. They put money on the estimates to provide for recreation outside and they also should care for those who took their recreation inside. If he could be assured that the new hall was a sound commercial venture he would support it, but he could not support it without that assurance.

Cr. McIntosh said he had pleasure in supporting the motion. There was no room to move in the present hall, and for a long time there had been great complaints about it. It was high time they made an effort to get a proper hall.

Cr. Archbold said he agreed with Cr. Plant's figures, but he came from a ward with hardly any metal in it. Last winter they could hardly get as bad and the south parts were just as bad. He knew the present hall was inadequate. Everyone admitted that, but was it more essential to provide a building for the pleasure of the people or to make the streets in order that they could get about? There were several important matters which should be taken in hand before they attempted to reduce their borrowing power by £3000 in erecting a town hall. Cr. Plant's revenue from Prater's was hardly fair, for there they had a population of 11,000, while we only had 14,000.

Cr. Hastings said that after careful consideration he had decided to support the resolution. The question was how the spending of £3000 on a hall would affect their borrowing powers. Cr. Plant had shown that after providing for all the big works in sight, including the erection of a hall, they would have a margin (even if the money were immediately spent) of £2000. It was a pity the red herring of the streets had been dragged across this question. They all knew that the money required for private street construction was obtained on the security of the special improvement rate, and did not affect the borrowing powers at all.

Cr. Plant—How, then, did he not build the hall if it would not affect private street construction.

Cr. Hastings—So even if they did or did not build the hall it would not affect private street construction.

Cr. Harry said he was going to oppose the resolution, as he believed it would affect street construction, more especially those streets which had been formed and channelled under the old policy and were now awaiting the metal to complete them. They could never be completed out of revenue, and it would not be fair if they did. So there was nothing but loan money to fall back upon and this objection should be met before a town hall were erected. No mention was made by Cr. Plant of a stone crusher. That also must be provided for by loan.

Cr. Plant—You can borrow for that. Cr. Harry went on to say that it would be good streets and not a grand total that would induce people to settle here. Though he agreed that the present hall was not at all as it should be he would have to vote against the resolution.

The mayor said Cr. Plant had put the matter very well from his point of view, and he would congratulate him, but he was going to vote against the motion. He put the Heidelberg drainage liability down at £5000, and in addition to the works enumerated by Cr. Plant there were such works as the raising of the channels on the east side of High street and in Rowley's road, which he estimated would cost about £2000, which would bring the expenditure up to £12,000, or something above their borrowing powers. For this reason he thought it unwise to spend £3000 in the building of a hall. As he had been already pointed out there were other works more urgent. He said this though he used the town hall a lot and had to put up with its discomforts. Further, he was of opinion that the hall, before its building and furnishing was completed, would cost £4000. And the contemplated increase of revenue was something mythical, as extra upkeep and attendance would have to be set off against it. Certainly they could not stand any addition to their ordinary expenditure as the overheads have year after year increased by £817 16s 11d and now stand at £1417. They must take no risks of increasing their overdraft.

Cr. Lees said he was in favor of the resolution because he believed it was a sound commercial proposition. The necessity for street construction was like the power, something that would be always with them. If they went on for the next 30 years the same excuse would be raised. The ratemakers were credited with expressing their opinions pretty freely, but he had not yet been represented by the ratemakers which he represented for expressing the sentiment as to a new town hall built. Sooner or later they must have a town hall, and he believed the figures put forward by Cr. Plant were genuine figures. The present hall was a most unpleasant building to be in. He always felt he was sucking in microbes by the million—(laughter)—and if a window was opened there was a draught. A year ago it was said there was no money for parks but now councillors were falling over one another in order to get hold of them. The same "no money" cry was now being raised against the erection of a proper hall. He had met people who objected to live in Northcote because there was no place to go and get a night's amusement.

Cr. Dennis said he did not feel quite satisfied to accept Cr. Plant's figures re the loan monies. He (Cr. Dennis) opposed on the hustings any expenditure on the town hall for the next two years, but he understood then concerned every councillor must recognize the necessity for better hall accommodation. Cr. Plant had said that the new hall would pay for the jump. They must judge of this by the revenue from the hall last year. It was only £138 18s.

Notice of Intention to Borrow Money on the Security of a Special Improvement Charge.

Take Notice that the Council of the Town of Northcote, at a meeting thereof held on the 16th day of August, 1909, did, by resolution, make a Special Improvement Charge for the purposes of the following items and three pence in the £1 yearly on the properties comprised in the several schemes of apportionment for the construction of—

(a) Shaftbury parade, between High street and Tullivay parade, Plan 275.
(b) Part of Oatch street, from Victoria road to Leonard street, Plan 353.
(c) Woolton avenue, between Railway parade and High street, Plan 372.
(d) Victoria Road, between Westgarth street and Clarke street, Plan 438.
(e) Nunnally avenue, from the railway to St. George's road, part of St. Clair avenue, and part of Raymond street, Plan 473.

Such Special Improvement Charge being made and levied ratably in proportion to the amount of the cost of the works apportioned in respect of such property as set out in the schemes and in regard to the period of nine years dating from the 1st day of October, 1909, for defraying the costs, charges, and expenses to be incurred in forming, channelling and metalling, paving and otherwise making good to the satisfaction of the Council the aforesaid streets and lanes.

That for the liquidation of such loan an amount of not less than 10 per cent of the principal sum will be paid off in each year and interest at the rate not exceeding 5 1/2 per cent per annum be payable up to the termination of the loan at the Commercial Bank of Australia Limited, High street, Northcote, or at the office of the Mortgagee.

Dated this 16th day of October, 1909.

By order,
W. G. SWIFT,
Town Clerk.

OUSELEY'S RELAPSE

By A. St. John.

Ralph Valnorh was in a brown study... as he traced heavily on the grey... pavement, through the misty drizzle...

"You left it in the taxi," said the man, touching his dripping cap. "Can't stop now. Police, you know."

"What do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Ask me another, Tom!" Ralph replied, and he turned to the man... "I can't stop now. Police, you know."

"You've got a ruffian here, every blessed one," said the man, leaning forward... "You've got a ruffian here, every blessed one."

"What do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

casque paintings in ponderous faded frames, small engravings finding accommodation between the days... "The sight of a slim, fair maiden...

"You're friends said know—all in good time," replied Ralph coolly... "You're friends said know—all in good time."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

shortly then to Ralph: "Please explain, air. Have you seen..." "Let us discuss a matter with your father before we go..."

"You're friends said know—all in good time," replied Ralph coolly... "You're friends said know—all in good time."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"THE GHOST" It was a bitter spring night, with a chill rain and an easterly wind that blew in vicious ruffian street corners...

"You're friends said know—all in good time," replied Ralph coolly... "You're friends said know—all in good time."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

He was impressed for a long time in the clearly-written pages which Ralph had turned out in the early hours of the morning...

"You're friends said know—all in good time," replied Ralph coolly... "You're friends said know—all in good time."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Yes—Geoffrey Randall—he told me he acts as your secretary." "The ghost!" He had nearly derided him of his secret...

"You're friends said know—all in good time," replied Ralph coolly... "You're friends said know—all in good time."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"THE ROMANCE OF THE SUBMARINE." There are probably many who look upon the submarine as one of the latest of scientific marvels...

"You're friends said know—all in good time," replied Ralph coolly... "You're friends said know—all in good time."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."

"Do you mean?" he asked, his indignation rising. "I'm not the kind of fellow who discards things like this."
