"MANI" A True Story in Seven Chapters. By WILL W. ROCK. CHAPTER I. BETWEEN ONE AND TWO IN THE MORNING.

CHAPTER II. THE MISSING THIRD. The party was not complete. It required a third—and, as Rudyard Kipling says, it is another story.

CHAPTER III. THE TRAVELLER. At this stage, a little light on the progress of the party. Two of them, that is to say, one of the party.

CHAPTER IV. A LANDING AND AN ANCHORAGE. The other party was packed with a dense crowd, and in the scramble that came with the disembarking the two were scattered.

CHAPTER V. A GUID NEW YEAR. A Guid New Year! A Guid New Year! He observed solemnly the blind Scotchman.

CHAPTER VI. THE NIGHT OF THE PARTY. Would that I might close the story here, and draw a well-earned ending.

THE BLUE ROSE. TO COOL A HOT HOUSE.

SIMPSON'S ROMANCE

With a look of curiosity mingled with fear...

She was the daughter of an analytical chemist who had held a fairly good position in a sugar refinery...

Yet from a physical standpoint he seemed to thrive on money-grubbing. He was above the average height...

But a rumor had reached Ethel Trent of a vacancy for a typist, and she had made a desperate, but successful effort to obtain the post...

She looked at him for a moment with quivering lips. "And so you have understood all this for years? You have done so for years?"

"Ethel, my darling, never mind about the money. Will you let me try to make amends for my father's sin? I love you."

The Girl and the Ring.

By Reeves Shaw.

The earnest little man in the tattered suit looked at her. He was unmistakably honest...

"All right," Trevelyan decided, suddenly. "I'll look her over. I'll be back in half an hour."

"I haven't quite decided. I shall send it to charity if you don't mind," he said, looking at her with a smile.

"I don't care a hang how you stand up so long as you've brought the dough. Got it?"

"I don't care a hang how you stand up so long as you've brought the dough. Got it?"

OUR SENSE OF TOUCH.

The organs of this sense are really distributed over the whole of our bodies...

"I don't care a hang how you stand up so long as you've brought the dough. Got it?"

"I don't care a hang how you stand up so long as you've brought the dough. Got it?"

"I don't care a hang how you stand up so long as you've brought the dough. Got it?"

"I don't care a hang how you stand up so long as you've brought the dough. Got it?"

THE MYSTERY OF THE LOST WAGON TRAIN.

Years ago, when there were no railroads between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans...

"The man who had been buried under the landslide. He had been buried under the landslide."

"The man who had been buried under the landslide. He had been buried under the landslide."

"The man who had been buried under the landslide. He had been buried under the landslide."
