Northchote Police Court.
MONDAY, 27th JULY.
[Before Dr. Cole, P.M., and Messrs Police W. W. Drane, and J. F. W. W. Drane.]
A motor car at a speed dangerous to the public having regard to the circumstances of the case, was fined 20s.
Several constables deposed that on the 27th ult. defendant drove a motor car past the picture theatre, High Street, Northchote, at a speed of 20 to 30 miles an hour. It was at the time of an interval of the theatre, and there were about 200 people in the street. There were several persons in the motor car, calling out laughing. Warning notes were sounded from the car as it drove past. The car was stopped by the police at the picture theatre. Defendant deposed that he had eight passengers on the car at the time in question. He consented to be driven at 18 miles per hour. Had perfect control of the car. Did not notice anyone on the roadway, but saw several people on the footways. Sounded the horn while passing the theatre.
Constable W. F. Drane deposed that he saw defendant drive past the picture theatre on the 27th ult. at a speed of 20 to 30 miles an hour. He saw several people on the footways. Sounded the horn while passing the theatre.

LETTER FROM LONDON.

A TRIP TO THE LAKES DISTRICT. Keswick Hotel, London. The way in which we stumbled into this palatial and luxurious hotel was really amusing.

INTO FAIRYLAND, for a long and spacious glassed-in archway, filled with beautiful flowering plants and stately lily right into the hotel.

After the approaches thereof, our rooms did not very much surprise us. They were certainly fine apartments, 20 x 20, or so, with luxurious easy chairs.

THE FINEST DRIVE IN THE UNITED KINGDOM. After taking it we were inclined to agree with the authorities, feeling that nothing could surpass it for beauty and charm.

On Monday we packed up our very much beloved and made south. THROUGH THE LAKE COUNTRY. At far as Waterhead, at the top of Windermere, it is a coach journey.

Pender's Grove Association. The usual meeting was held in the hall on Wednesday last. Mr. E. A. Day's motion to delete the word "petitioners" from the name of the Association came up first.

BASEBALL. A GRADE. Northcote scored their fourth successive victory last Saturday, when they easily defeated South Melbourne for a full nine innings game.

PRESTON POLICE COURT.

TUESDAY, 4TH AUGUST. [Before Dr. Cole, P.M., and Messrs Barrow and Ellison, J's.P.] The police proceeded against four cyclists for riding on footpaths and 10/- fines were imposed in each case.

James Edwin Jones, inspector under Milk and Dairy Supervision Act, proceeded against E. Hearns on a charge of not holding a license on the 20th June, 1914, while conducting a dairy in Oak over road, Preston.

Maurice Henry Kelly, sworn, deposed that on the 15th July, 1914, he was driving a dog named Vincent, and was training another dog named Vincent.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hassett.— On Sunday last the eighth anniversary of the above church was celebrated by the Rev. Newman, in his usual manner.

On Wednesday the annual social and business meeting was held. Through the kindness of the pastor, the pleasant night to accept from members of the church, which would soon need more accommodation.

CHURCH NEWS.

The Rev. T. S. B. Woodfull, conference evangelist, will commence an evangelistic mission on Sunday next in the Preston Methodist church.

A continuation of the theme "Christ's Temptation," will be discussed at the South Preston Methodist Young Men's Bible Class at 2.30 to-morrow afternoon.

At the Baptist church special war intercession will mark both services on Sunday, and all interested in an early termination of hostilities are invited to attend.

Desires of raising funds for the purpose of purchasing a piano for the Northcote State School, the school committee hit upon the happy idea of organizing a children's concert.

A BROTHER'S LOVE

By GRAHAM BROWN. Author of "The Soul of Lucette," "The Healer of the Sacred Scarab," etc.

Published by Arrangement with Cassell and Co. All Rights Reserved. CHAPTER XXIV.

Remorse. Angus Galbraith stood at the fireplace for a long time motionless. Left to himself he stepped in his face the intense agitation of his mind...

The tears fell unheededly as Angus Galbraith listened. He felt impulse was to go into that room, and kneeling beside his brother, mingle his prayers with those of the boy in his grief.

He went towards the door leading into the bedroom, but here again he paused irresolute. He could not go in. He returned to the table still listening to the murmur of Eric's voice...

"Ah, he said, advancing, 'perhaps you will be able to tell me if Mr. Galbraith is in?'" "My brother is in his bed-room," said Angus, unhesitatingly pointing to the door of the inner room.

"Eric and Angus looked blankly at the doctor. He seemed to be at the doctor's feet, and Angus followed him into the coffee-room, which was, luckily, empty."

"Let me begin at the beginning," said Dr. George, adjusting his eyeglasses. "Eric was a student in my class a year or two ago. On the other day I came upon him by chance in Princess-street."

CHAPTER XXV. "God is More Merciful Than Man," Eric is morose from his knees, and there was a look in his eyes which told of a heart at last at peace with itself.

The fraternal wrath of his brother. In his present chastened mood it never entered his mind to question the moral reprobation that had inspired Angus to buy this weapon of death. He was far too sick and sad at heart...

"I have just been having a chat with you about your gun," said Dr. George. "I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"What do you mean by that?" asked Eric. "I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

matter that required careful thought. This sudden, startling development raised Angus, the ghost of old fears or a long and silent vigil, to faint. Nellie Charlton had come to Port Craigie with a purpose, and that purpose would ill for Eric, her husband, and she felt ready to sacrifice that would ill for Eric, and she was thankful that she had been so well forward.

THE ART OF NAMES. Illuminating Facts. It is due to the vivid imagination of women that so many of us are labelled with strange names and apparently meaningless surnames (says Brigg).

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

WIT AND HUMOR. Self-Evident. Mistakes (to a good purpose) will not find me difficult to find. I am not a Bridget. I'm sure not, I'm sure not, I'm sure not. I've seen your husband.

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

HOW AUTHORS GET IDEAS. Writing is an art that almost any educated person may be expected to have enough industry in their make-up. But it is of little use to learn composition if you have not got ideas. You must have a plot before you can begin to write, and this is the great stumbling block to the average writer.

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

THE POWER OF ADVERTISING. A Berlin pastrycook, finding his business decreasing, cuddled his brains for some novel and effective method of attracting customers. He got on one which promised at least to be successful. For a few shillings he had a notice in a leading daily.

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

"I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do. I have just been having a chat with you about your gun. I am a doctor, and I know what you are trying to do."

LIFE IN PARTS OF MELBOURNE

The large majority of our suburban dwellers know very little of the conditions existing in their own beautiful City of Melbourne.

To learn more about the different classes of its inhabitants and the various conditions under which they live, one would do well to accompany a rent collector, as the writer recently did.

MARRIED WOMAN'S AGONISING PILES.

A MOTHER PRAISES ZAM-BUK.

Mrs. Evelyn Jarratt, of 47 Waterloo street, Surry Hills, Sydney, says: "About two and a half years ago I was afflicted with that terrible complaint, piles. The irritation was awful, and the agonising pain greatly increased my suffering. I applied an ointment, but this set up such a fever, and before I had finished the pot I was freed from all irritation, and the pains were gradually ceasing. After continuing with Zam-Buk, all traces of my complaint were removed."

"Some time afterwards I was confined, and a result of childbirth was an attack of piles. However, a few applications of Zam-Buk drove away my trouble. I was delighted with the mild and soothing action of Zam-Buk, it eased all inflammation in a splendid fashion."

"Zam-Buk should be kept handy in every home, especially where there are children in the family. My children at times suffer from cuts, sores and abrasions and the prompt application of Zam-Buk has given relief in each case. I am thankful for the relief I have derived from Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk is sold by all stores and chemists at 1/6 and 3/6 per pot. Every home needs Zam-Buk.

from on the ground floor and a room upstairs. The outbuildings are original, but hardly picturesque. The occupant of one stagers down to the back and only entrance, and breathes out a few words and a deal of alcoholic vapour—the former stating that she cannot pay this week's rent, and the latter indicating as plainly as words the reason why. However, she eventually stumbles back to commence with her business, per medium of the porter Boothby, per medium of the porter Boothby, per medium of the porter Boothby.

THE KAISER'S MOTHER.

ENGLISH PRINCESS HATED BY GERMANS.

CRUEL MEMORIES SHE NEVER FORGOT.

In the present bitter struggle when the Kaiser has declared war on practically all the world in his mad pursuit of a world-empire Germany, it is well to remember that his mother was an Englishwoman.

This woman narrowly escaped becoming a great historical character herself. She was a daughter of King William III and Queen Victoria.

Her father was a man of uncomparable range of knowledge, and he set about educating the little Princess Victoria as though she had been a boy.

The early part of this book, which is devoted to the happy home life of the Princess Victoria, is very good reading. Barely has there been a sovereign on a throne with a simple, sound common sense of Queen Victoria.

She married Prince Albert for love, and she carried on her household exactly as though she were the wife of a substantial London business professional man.

Hence she antagonized the German public at the outset and they regarded her as a foreigner and an interloper, who would not scruple to do anything to help her own country.

"The Crown Princess herself is an incarnation of this way of thinking. She is full of her own great condescension in marrying into our country."

THE KAISER AND THE WAR.

By Del McCay in "Table Talk."

TORPEDO OR BATTLESHIP.

WHICH WILL WIN?

"The Fire-Ship" is picturesque described by Mr. David Hannay as the most formidable ancestor of the torpedo—no of the torpedo boat, he reminds us, but of the weapon itself.

"Many affirm that she will not," says Mr. Hannay, "when what she has to fear is the torpedo launched by smaller craft on or below the surface of the water."

"There's been no king in Germany," the Kaiser said once, "to sacrifice himself like me to see his country thrice."

"The Crown Princess herself is an incarnation of this way of thinking. She is full of her own great condescension in marrying into our country."

"After the Swiss, the Germans are probably the thriftiest people in Europe," declares the Berlin correspondent of the Chicago "Tribune."

"The average woman can bluff almost any man, but when it comes to bluffing some other woman—well, that is another story."

FROM VARIOUS SOURCES.

It was a fine story and a pathetic story of the imperialist charwoman, who would not take her money out of the Government Savings Bank.

An eminent Wellington musician complains of a certain confusion caused by the prevailing fashion of the womenfolk to dock themselves in gaudy colors.

"Midst war and rumors of war and armagadons there is a proposed skirmish on the streets, which will be of interest to some."

"What's the matter?" asked Paddy the Doot.

"Strike me lucky," said Paddy, "I ain't told you it was in the religion and makes revolutions."

"The fingers that with dainty touch flicked flimsy lace aside, Pined sterner work inside the trig-gor-guard."

"That's the man who held the yardstick is a hero with the sun Where the Paris counter-jumpers are at war."

LADIES' LETTER.

With the war there has, of course, been postponement of practically all the military balls that were on the tapis.

Other social functions are going on, and this has led to expression of opinion as to whether it is seemly and in good taste for us to pursue the usual social round now the Empire is at war.

"Erected to the memory of William Tucker. Accidentally shot, as a mark of affection by his wife."

"What's the matter?" asked Paddy the Doot.

"Strike me lucky," said Paddy, "I ain't told you it was in the religion and makes revolutions."

"The fingers that with dainty touch flicked flimsy lace aside, Pined sterner work inside the trig-gor-guard."

"That's the man who held the yardstick is a hero with the sun Where the Paris counter-jumpers are at war."

THEY THOUGHT IT FUNNY!

Mr. Clifton Crawford is a Scot, and the other evening he was telling some amusing Scottish stories.

"It must be twenty years since I was there," he thought, "hanged if I don't get out and see how the old pieces is getting on."

"The successful man yearned to hear a word of praise, so he tried to lure the old man into conversation."

"Oh, ay," was the reply. "You'll have heard, then, that I've just won another election?"

"I'm a member of the Government now, I suppose you know?"

"It was not very encouraging so far, but the politician tried again."

"Oh, you'll have heard, then, that I've just won another election?"

FAIR-HAIRED FLIRTS.

"Ninety of every hundred respondents in divorce cases," said a celebrated American lawyer, Mr. Herman L. Roth, recently.

"Blondes are vain. Blondes are fickle. Blondes love no one but themselves."

"The first analysis of a man's emotions," writes "even though the man be a fool, he wants a woman who is true, and the brunette is nothing if not faithful."

"The hair is a challenge. She is the trouble-maker of the world."

"The tuning-fork is the latest marvel of medicine. Dr. James Cantile, a doctor who learned many strange clinical secrets during his adventures in China, and who is today one of our greatest experimentalists in the field of tropical medicine, has discovered that the tuning fork can prove of great help to physicians."

"Constatration has been caused in feminine circles in Budapest by a hair-order issued by the general command of the army corps of which Budapest is the headquarters."

"A short time ago this officer directed his officers from giving orders to their subordinates in the streets and now he has forbidden them to escort the fair sex to balls or other functions if the latter are wearing the silk skirt which has become the fashion in the Hungarian capital."

DULY EXPLAINED.

A famous scientist, whose early home had been in a country district, had long promised to visit the scenes of his boyhood, and deliver a lecture in aid of the fund for the maintenance of the place. At last he fulfilled his promise and the lecture was given.

"When, at the close of the lecture, he was conversing with some of the principal promoters of the affair, they warmly congratulated him on the facility with which he was making a technical matter of great interest to his somewhat uneducated audience."

"Oh," said he, by way of explanation, "I invariably fix my attention upon the more important points, and I make no attempt to make my lecture intelligible to the masses."

"Almost directly afterwards the leading public official of the little town came into the room, and made his way to where the speaker was standing."

"A new Robert Louis Stevenson story is told by Mr. S. S. McLeure in the reminiscences now appearing in McLeure's Magazine."

"The wives of officers are now faced with the alternative of being out of the fashion or of compromising the promotion of their husbands."

"A revolver which has been designed for the nervous woman to carry in her handbag is probably the smallest, most convenient and most reliable weapon of its kind in the world."

PATRIOTIC MEETING AT NORTHCOLE.

ROUSING ADDRESS BY HON. J. G. MEMBREY, M.L.A.

A representative meeting of citizens was held at the Town Hall on Monday evening in response to the Mayor's invitation to meet and consider the best ways and means of expressing the city's loyalty, and affording a final supply to the Empire Patriotic Fund inaugurated by the Lord Mayor of Melbourne.

to-day, and he trusted that when the crisis had passed Britain and the whole world would be in a better condition than ever before. (Applause.) He had pleasure in moving the following resolution—
