AUSTRALIA AS A WHEAT COUNTRY.

Whatever may be the future of Australia as a wheat-producing country (says the "Pastoral Review") it is very interesting to see her present position in this respect as compared with other countries.

It is interesting to see her present position in this respect as compared with other countries. The local press devotes so much space to the wheat industry of the Commonwealth...

Now in regard to the average yield per acre, the Commonwealth ranks twenty-fifth on the list of the world's wheat-producing countries.

Of the different States, New South Wales has made the most progress in wheat production during the last 12 years. The increase has been from 16,737,771 bushels in 1901 to 32,466,000 bushels in 1913.

The man who makes the first few days' work easy for his team, is the man who will do the biggest day's work later. By ignorant overworking of the horse the first week of spring, their efficiency for the season may be pretty well impaired.

Several of those who were at the door war and saw what was sent by well-meaning civilians from different parts of the world...

Not for a moment do I want to belittle the work of the women, but I think it ought to be arranged that they will really be of good service. There are so many fields into which it can be directed to good purpose.

When a lady patient living far from town had to telephone for her physician, she apologized for asking him to come such a distance. "The nurse has got a lot of good things to do for me," she said. "I happen to have another patient in that vicinity. I can kill two birds with one stone."

THE FRENCH WAR HORSE.

Horse-racing was a sport in France before England, and every Englishman interested in horse-racing is careful to point out the blunders of the leaders derived from the much-prized gift of "running horses"...

Not for a moment do I want to belittle the work of the women, but I think it ought to be arranged that they will really be of good service. There are so many fields into which it can be directed to good purpose.

THE SHYING HORSE.

The shying horse is often the best horse on the farm, and may be spoiled if treated foolishly. He is not to be spoiled and abused, but he is to be used to the object of his fears and soothed.

Encourage them to be down as much as possible. It saves the feet, and saves the legs. The horse that is kept well led, and never allowed to rest, will last much longer than one kept standing on a bare floor.

The hired man with horse-sense, even though he gets more money per month in pay, will be the cheapest in the end.

Wen by Waiting. He had just slipped into a restaurant and was about to order. Then he sat staring outward, quietly thoughtful in expression, and waited.

Do you believe you are blind? "No, sir," the barber replied. "There was a time when I used to give a cut, but I never do now. In fact, I don't give a cut for it any more."

What the Old Man Feared. The head of certain farms was recently approached by his son, just being introduced by an "father" said he, "I want to have a talk with you concerning my future. I have decided to become an artist. I have you any objections?"

A successful dairy farmer must know his business. He must fill up his stable with high-grade cows, and provide them with good food, sanitary quarters, and kind treatment. Then, by systematizing the work of the farm, and by individualizing the product of the members of the herd, he will be in a position to pick out the weak spots.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice in a small cup of black coffee is a safe remedy for bilious headache.

CHAPTER VII.

The situation was not an altogether pleasant one as far as I was concerned. I did not care a snap of the fingers for Madame Hanoteaux but I felt it was hardly playing the game to impose upon the woman in the way I was doing in order to get her husband's secret. But white I was in this frame of mind I recalled the face of Joan looking through the bars of the turret window, and I hardened my heart. "Madame Hanoteaux," I whispered, gently raising her tear-stained face, "what is the matter? Let me comfort you."

thing—something which I can't describe which kept me silent. "But how can you see her without being seen?" "It is a secret passage which my father showed me when I was a little girl," she answered. "I know it. It is round all the rooms of the west wing. I had only to look through a small hole in the wainscoting to watch her."

CHAPTER VIII. So noiselessly had the secret door opened that the girl neither heard nor suspected my presence. Engrossed in her own sad thoughts, she sat in the window, gazing across the street into the dark, mysterious forest beyond. She sat so motionless that she seemed almost a part of the scene, carved to the semblance of life."

death of her grandfather, and impressed by the loneliness of her situation, Joan hardly listened to him. After they had had a hot cup of coffee by one of the men, which, as she was very cold, she drank with avidity. Evidently it had been brewed in the kitchen afterwards she fell into a deep sleep, from which she did not wake till she found herself in the old wing of the chateau.

The Oldest of Human Arts. Although Australia should suffer the least of the British dominions by the great world war now proceeding, the fact that agriculture, the oldest of human arts, is the backbone of national prosperity, the millions of crops in the field would fare badly were it not for the produce grown by the farmers of the newer countries. Great Britain claims to be the greatest manufacturing nation in the world, but agriculture is admittedly her most important industry.

Land Settlement in the North. When I wrote in these columns some twelve months ago it was to give a brief outline of the purchases made by the Government of the land of the Stanhope, Bonshaw, Lauderdale and Robill estates, in the parish of Girgarran, with the object of establishing an irrigation area and promoting and settling on small holdings. Naturally, a great deal of work and expense are entailed in laying out such estates as these for occupation by the landless.

Selecting the Heifer. There is an old saying that a cow cannot produce both milk and beef. It may be to a certain extent correct, although there are some animals scattered about the country that come very near to upsetting the truth of that saying. In selecting the heifer, we are generally on the lookout for what we hope will eventually become a "general purpose" cow.

Points to Bear in Mind. To judge a heifer correctly she should be seen a few days after calving, when her udder is at its best, and shows its capabilities, for as milk is her principal product, the size and shape of this naturally important attribute should be remembered that the teats get bigger by using, and therefore smaller teats are to be preferred to larger ones in a heifer.

THE VALUE OF AYRSHIRES. Mr. W. J. Jenkins, "Fair View," Canterbury, New Zealand, gives his opinion as follows:—"Twenty years' experience of Ayrshire cattle has convinced me that they are the most profitable cattle to rear on a small farm."

POSITION IN THE EMPIRE CAPITAL.

In a very full budget the special representative in London of the Sydney "Sun" gives an interesting narrative of events and incidents in the Empire capital on the declaration of war.

King George's Sagacity. From first to last the King never appeared until his signature had to be affixed to proclamations, or until his subjects begged a glimpse of him on the balcony at the Palace.

Jack sang the Marseillaise, while the gallant French responded with God Save the King. The frayed feelings between the races came uppermost in these parting moments.

When the King came to the balcony to see the people, he was met by a number of young men who were shouting "God Save the King" and "God Save the Queen."

Jack sang the Marseillaise, while the gallant French responded with God Save the King. The frayed feelings between the races came uppermost in these parting moments.

Women's Piteous Part. Mobilisation has wrung the hearts of millions upon millions of women. In Europe the best part of 12,000,000 men have been pressed into active service.

The Stubborn Englishman. Drake was not an accident; he was a type. The naval fight which will be remembered as the battle of the bows.

Back to England. The scramble to get back from Europe was terrifying in its intensity. The Englishman abroad may conduct himself in a number of ways.

German Cheer England. One German was found, engaged in the work of a German café in Piccadilly with only one word in his right hand.

"DOWN WITH WAR."

GERMAN SOCIALISTS' APPEAL FOR PEACE.

WERE THE PARTY LEADERS BIBBED?

Surrounded by soldiers and living all his life in the military atmosphere of Berlin, the Kaiser Wilhelm was for years regarded as the menace of peace in Europe.

MANIFESTO OF THE GERMAN SOCIAL-DEMOCRATIC PARTY. "The fields in the Balkans are not yet dry from the blood of those who have been massacred by the sword."

KAISER AND KRUPPS. SAID TO BE A PARTNER. With its collieries, its iron mines, and its steel works, its workshops of Essen and Magdeburg, its naval dockyards of Kiel with their 5000 gunners, 60,000 workmen, and the 150,000 persons who own their lives to it, the firm of Krupp represents the most powerful and complete achievement of modern industry in the world.

Now, Freddie, go and kiss your little mother, and make it us, said Freddie's mother.

FROM VARIOUS SOURCES.

"Are you volunteering for the war?" a policeman was asked by an acquaintance. "No," replied the policeman. "You're paired with a German."

Her hat tipped over, no eye for eye. "This very plain she cannot see. With hair combed over the car, 'tis clear."

THE CONQUERING HOBBLE. When first I saw a hobble skit, I was sure to see a man with a hobble. My eyes lit positively hot.

Do you know the problem the great thinkers will be faced with when the European war ends? It is not the matter of all the butchers sent home again. They will have to puzzle their brains as to how best to build up the white race.

THE TURKEY AND THE WAR. By Dol W. McCay. "Calm," a Constantinople newspaper, prints an article which suggests that Turkey is wobbling and may side with the Germans.

THE STRANGE MEETING. Canon Roberts, of Manchester, rector of St. John's, Longsight, who rowed in the Oxford boat fifty years ago, is in the Oxford of strange days of coincidence.

Some time ago a pretty little baby girl arrived at a happy family home and immediately the entire family, including aunts, cousins and nephews, were busy selecting an appropriate name for the new arrival.

What to Grow for the Army.

THE HOME-COMING OF A YOUTHFUL BRIDE. The home-coming of a youthful bride and her groom was nearly a tragedy of its kind by one of those trivial accidents which seem to occur at the time and seem merely funny later on.

THE RIGHT TIME TO WED.

What the Author of "How to be Happy though Married" Says about it.

When to Marry.

"People rush into matrimony as they rush to catch a train, and in their hurry they will do anything to get on board. The rush in reference to marriage generally comes either from the desperation of young years or from the inexperience of youth."
