Work of The Comforts Fund

At the second annual meeting of the Northcote Citizens' Comforts Fund (a report of which appeared in last issue) on October 1, an interesting address was given by Major G. S. Slobom, Australian Comforts Fund Commissioner, who was welcomed by the Mayor (Cr. H. Sheehan).

Major Slobom said he appreciated the opportunity of being present to tell something of the work of the A.C.F. He pointed out that there were two main bodies dealing with the welfare of soldiers in the front lines, the A.C.F. and the Red Cross. The A.C.F. was a civilian organization and the Red Cross was a government organization.

Major Slobom said that the A.C.F. was a civilian organization and the Red Cross was a government organization. He mentioned that the A.C.F. had a large number of volunteers and that they were doing a great deal of work for the troops.

Work of The Comforts Fund

At the meeting of the Northcote Branch of the Workers' National Association on Friday night, October 13, a lecture was given by Mr. E. Ellis of Northcote on the production of a modern newspaper.

The speaker went on to give an outline of the organization required to cover the gathering of news and photographs, how the size of the paper is determined, the method of preparing 'dummies' showing where news and pictures are to appear in the completed paper.

Mr. Ellis traced the history of the printing press from the first printing press in Europe to the modern rotary printing machine. He mentioned that the first printing press was invented by Johannes Gensfleisch, known as Gutenberg.

Advantages Of Vegetable Growing At Home

Vital Assistance To Nation's War Effort!

WILL REDUCE HIGH COST OF LIVING

An Australia wide campaign is now in progress to induce householders to produce all, or part, of their vegetable needs in their own gardens. The success of this campaign is an urgent National matter for with householders supplying themselves the Government will be able to divert the produce of commercial market gardeners to channels whence it will be directed to supplying Allied forces and civilians.

Further householders will considerably reduce the high cost of war-time living, for to-day there is no greater drain on the family purse than that necessitated by the purchase of vegetables.

To assist citizens in their efforts the Department of Agriculture has compiled a booklet entitled "WARTIME VEGETABLE GROWING AT HOME" copies of which are available free of charge at the Northcote Town Hall (see advt.). The booklet is lucidly written and clearly illustrated and will assist tyros to obtain the best results from their efforts.

We reproduce passages from the book so that our readers can gauge the value of immediately obtaining their own copies.

Layout of Garden

Choose a site which is not shaded, particularly in winter, and is sheltered from winds. The best plants should run north and south if possible, but not up and down hill. Be at least 4 feet wide. In that mature or 2 inches of low heavy soils and in light soils in winter, but in heavy soils in summer, the soil should be 12 inches of soil above the paths.

Soil Preparation

Do not dig or cultivate the soil while it is sodden. Deep working is advisable. Trench the beds to 18 inches, but avoid bringing the sub-soil to the surface. Bury vegetable waste deeply, for mixing with the top-soil at the next trenching.

Sowing Seed

In the national interest, vegetable seeds should be used as economically as possible. The home gardener usually sows for top thickly. Wherever small seeds are to be sown the rows are best covered with fine soil or a half-inch of fine stable manure or chaff, to prevent evaporation of the surface. A strip ofessian or an effective. Another plan is to plant the seeds at the bottom of a wide shallow trench, and cover with a board. If the soil is moist, no watering will then be necessary until the seedlings have appeared. These covers should be removed as soon as the

Watering

Water well before preparing the surface finally for sowing. The rows are covered with a board. Lightly water after sowing, and in hot weather water again, once or more each day until the seedlings are 1 inch high in cool weather keep the surface moist with frequent watering. When plants are firmly established, water deeply once or twice a week. Most crops are between a sprinkler, especially lettuce in the cool months. The water in the vegetable garden needs more frequent watering than in the lawn.

Rotation of Crops

The ideal sequence of crops on a plot is:—
1. Leaf crops and tomatoes—using stable manure or compost, if available.
2. Root crops and onions—avoid using stable manure, use superphosphate and sulphate of ammonia.
3. Legumes—use superphosphate only, die in plants after picking pods.
Then start again at the leaf crop. Avoid using crops of the same type or of the same family on the same plot in succession; for instance, do not follow carrots with parsnips, cabbages with cauliflowers, onions with leeks, tomatoes with potatoes.
